BI & BI REPORT

Co-Chairmen Laurendeau, Dunton —CP

'Living in French must be made possible in every part of Canada where there are enough French-speaking people'

New Charter, Full Partnership

Bilingual Areas 'Cornerstone'

OTTAWA (CP)—The royal commission on bilingualism and biculturalism recommends what it calls a new charter, including constitutional changes, to guarantee minority language and education rights to both French and English-speaking Canadians throughout the country.

In tabling the report Tuesday in the Commons, Prime Minister Pearson repeated that "the government fully endorses the principle of linguistic and cultural equality that forms the core of this report."

Pearson said the cabinet has already considered the report and that he is suggesting that it be added to the agenda for the federal-provincial constitutional conference here early next year. (See also Page 14).

Davidson Dunton, co-chairman of the commission, told a press conference the commission has no firm reason to believe that any province outside Quebec will adopt any of its recommendations.

Andre Laurendeau, the commission's other co-chairman, said he has serious doubts that the report will convert Quebec separatists into federalists.

Dunton emphasized that the aim of the report is not to make all Canadians bilingual—or even any more than now are bilingual.

The aim was to make language and education opportunities available to French or English minorities.

Six of the commission's recommendations deal primarily with matters under provincial jurisdiction. Five involve both the federal and provincial administrations and three lie within Ottawa's jurisdiction.

Both Dunton and Laurendeau said the national crisis they referred to in their 1965 preliminary report still exists.

"It is very much still here—the same one," Dunton added.

The commission report says:

"The impossibility of living a full life in French outside Quebec and even in certain parts of Quebec is certainly one cause of the present crisis in Canada.

"Living in French must be made possible in every part of Canada where there are enough French-speaking people."

To achieve this end, the commission recommends:

- New Brunswick and Ontario recognize English and French as official languages as soon as possible.
- Any other province recognize English and French as official languages whenever its official-language minority reaches or exceeds 10 per cent of the population.
- Provinces other than Quebec, New Brunswick and Ontario accept use of both languages in legislature debates and provide appropriate services in French for French-speaking minorities.
- Establishment of bilingual district anywhere in Canada that the official-language minority is 10 per cent or more of the population.
- Recognition of the rights of Canadian parents to have their children educated in French or English, implementation depending on the concentration of the minority population.
- Declaration that English and French are the official languages of the Parliament of Canada and federal courts, government and administration.
- Provincial governments amend their municipal legislation to remove all obstacles to the use of both French and English in local government.
- Enactment of a federal official language act and appointment of a commissioner of official languages—a "linguistic ombudsman"—to ensure respect for the status of both languages.
- Enactment of a similar act by the legislatures of officially bilingual provinces and appointment of provincial commissioners.
- A completely bilingual federal capital area at Ottawa—bilingual in public service and administration, courts, local government and education.

The commission also recommends a new section in the British North America Act to guarantee minority education rights and a rewritten section 133 to guarantee minority language rights outside Quebec.

B.C. GROUP SEEKING GRADE 1 IN FRENCH

COQUITLAM (CP) — The French-Canadian Federation of British Columbia has announced it will ask for French to be used as a language of instruction in public school primary grades in this Vancouver suburb.

Federation secretary-general Romeo Paquette said the proposal would be made at a Dec. 12 meeting between the federation and school trustees of district 43.

The federation is taking the initiative because of a recent comment by Premier Bennett, said Mr. Paquette.

"Mr. Bennett said French language instruction in the public school system could be considered where there was a concentration of French-speaking people in the community and if the district school board made such a request," he said.

★ ★ ★

"We hope we can convince District 43 school board to make such a request."

Mr. Paquette estimated that there were 8,000 French-speaking people within the school district, most living in the suburb of Maillardville.

★ ★ ★

He said the federation would like to see French language classes begin at Grade 1 and gradually work up through the higher grades of Coquitlam's school system. They should, he said, be optional.

"This would mean that by the time a student graduates from Grade 12, he could become fluent in both French and English."

Bonner Studies First

British Columbia government circles made no immediate comment Tuesday on the contents of the Bi and Bi report.

Premier Bennett was not available, and Attorney-General Robert Bonner said the report was a long time in the making and declined to give "an off the cuff summary of its contents." He said he would study it carefully.

Unity Holds Key

OTTAWA (CP)—Prime Minister Pearson told the Commons Tuesday solutions to the giant problems underscored by the royal commission on bilingualism and biculturalism must be based on unity and partnership.

"They must, they will, be found so Canada can live and grow to provide a good life for all its people."

Opposition Leader Robert Stanfield said the health and future of Confederation is involved in the issue and Parliament, the government and all political parties must be prepared to provide leadership.

The Progressive Conservative party had no desire to derive any partisan advantage from any matters dealt with in the report.

FULLY AWARE

"Our party will study this with full awareness of the gravity of the matters being discussed."

Stanfield said he hoped the full report of the commission would be made available as soon as possible. Some of the recommendations came under jurisdiction of the provinces, but "the whole area of federal-provincial relations relates to problems of concern to the country as a whole."

He recommended the first step would be for the prime minister to consult with the working committee of premiers.

PROBLEM ESCALATES

Stanfield said the problems had "been escalated" in recent months.

He questioned to what degree the Estates General of French-Canada represented the people and said it was fortunate the Confederation of Tomorrow conference took place in Toronto at the same time as the Estates General met in Montreal.

"It would be depressing for Canadians to have only the picture created by the Estates General."

Stanfield said he was not inclined to melodrama or to oversimplification, but "the future of the country is in our hands."

"We will be put to the test. I hope we will not be found wanting."

SOLUTIONS NEEDED

NDP Leader Tommy Douglas said those who find the recommendations of the report radical should realize that radical solutions are needed for the country's problems.

It was necessary to establish equality of status between English- and French-speaking communities and to build a strong and viable sovereign state with an ever-increasing standard of living.

The powers of the federal government must remain strong enough to eliminate the regional disparities in Canada, he said. This might mean some "special arrangement," with Quebec.

PEARSON PRAISED

Creditiste Leader Real Caouette, after congratulating the commissioners for the report, praised Pearson as the person chiefly responsible for national understanding of French-Canadian problems.

Caouette said Canada had never experienced this kind of understanding before, even under French-speaking prime ministers.

Big Storm Smash Hit On Island

Winds smashed roofs, knocked trees over roads, and sent concrete-block wall tumbling onto cars in Nanaimo as storm swept Vancouver Island Tuesday. (See stories Pages 11, 20) Chains were required on Malahat, as heavy snow slowed traffic. Police said snow was also heavy in Alberni-Tofino and Shawnigan Lake area. — (Agnes Flett)

Volcano Wrecks Bases

Antarctic Sea Boils

SANTIAGO (AP) — A volcano erupting unexpectedly from the depths of an ancient lake on the Antarctic island of Deception wrecked the scientific bases of three nations Tuesday and forced researchers to flee, Chilean officials reported.

Braving a rain of ashes and rocks, Chilean Navy helicopters took 30 Chilean and eight British researchers and military personnel to the Chilean ship Piloto Pardo waiting off shore.

Argentine navy helicopters took off 14 Argentine men and landed them on the Argentine ship Bahia Aguirre. The navy said the sea was boiling and the ship left the scene in a hail of rocks hurled from the volcano.

No volcanic eruption had been reported in more than 120 years on the island until geysers of boiling water from the lake began shooting up several days ago. The island is 600 miles south of the tip of South America.

Then the volcano erupted in full fury Monday, sending ash and rock into the air and sending lava down ravines from the lake. A dense cloud of smoke shrouded the island and ashes blanketed the white ice caps.

BASES WRECKED

The interior ministry said the British, Chilean and Argentine bases, hewn from the bitterly cold wastes, were wrecked by the volcano's force. The bases are used for weather and oceanographic research.

"We shan't be returning to the island until we know it is completely safe," said a British spokesman.

"If we were to land the men again after a few months and there was another eruption, we couldn't get them off. The Antarctic winter would have settled in and the area would be completely inaccessible."

Someone Knew, Cared —Now Someone Lives

It is not overly dramatic to state that for the hard-pressed, the receipt of a 500 Fund cheque has sometimes meant withdrawal from the brink of suicide.

To a person temporarily deranged by worry, a cheque means somebody knows and cares. A few dollars provides the spur to go on.

Last Christmas was just such a one for 31-year-old Joan and her young son.

The "500" Fund

Widowed two years earlier, she had come to Victoria to take a course that would enable her to be self-supporting.

For 18 months she had struggled to study, inadequately clothed, poorly fed, and usually downright hungry.

The boy, looked after during the day by another welfare recipient, was old enough to tell her what he wanted for Christmas.

TRUSTING REPLY

She tried to explain that she could not get him the modest treat, but was met with the trusting reply: "If you can't get it, Santa Claus will, and he'll give us a tree that lights, and lots of things to eat."

Heartbroken by his simple trust, she was ready to commit suicide rather than go on any longer when a cheque for $30 arrived from the Colonist 500 Fund, and changed her life.

This year things have changed. She successfully completed her course and now has an adequate income.

This year she is giving to the fund instead of receiving, thought her donation will still

Sitter Leads Way for Trio

Seventeen-year-old babysitter Pat Dawes roused her three charges, Chris, 8, Michael, 10 and Janet 4, dressed them and led them to safety when she smelled smoke at 1617 Pembroke at 12:15 a.m. today.

Then she returned with firemen and led the family dog, Sweetie to safety from the basement.

Firemen said the blaze heavily damaged the porch.

Liquor Prices Up Today

The B.C. Liquor Control Board Tuesday night announced a price increase for spirits, beer and wine effective today.

The board said beer prices increase by five cents a dozen, ale by 10 cents, spirits go up by 35 cents for a 26-ounce bottle and 20 cents for the 13-ounce bottle. Wine prices increased by 10 cents aquart and 20 cents for a half-gallon.

Fire Destroys Cafe, Shops

LETHBRIDGE (CP)—A restaurant and at least three businesses housed in a hotel-convention centre were destroyed in a $500,000 fire.

Firemen were hampered for a while by exploding high-calibre ammunition stored in a gun craft shop. They also watered down an area of the shop where two kegs of gunpowder were threatened by the fire.

Dosco Bill Approved

HALIFAX (CP) — The Nova Scotia legislature has unanimously voted second reading and approval in principle to a bill ratifying an agreement between the government and Dominion Steel and Coal Corp.

Can Dates Thrive In Potted Palms?

BILL THOMAS' NOTEBOOK
Wednesday

BIG DATE: Those magazines that are full of girl pictures are a bore. It seems to me a real live gal, no matter what she looks like, is better than a picture.

After looking over the pictures of the stars of Ice Capades, it was easy to see they have a flock of living dolls.

I asked permission from my wife to try to make a date with one of the stars to see how they look offstage. Bev consulted the six children, and they said of any gal was crazy enough to accept, then go ahead.

I called Jan Mitchell, the publicity expert for the show, and put forward my idea of a night on the town with a star. The proposal was turned down flat. Miss Mitchell countered with a tentative lunch engagement, with chaperone. I parried with the idea of something a little later in the day, and we compromised.

Miss Mitchell said I could have my date unchaperoned if I would settle for tea and crumpets in the palm-fronded lobby of the Empress Hotel. After all, nothing unseemly ever happens in the lobby of the Empress.

I will be reporting back on my big moment in the next column. The anticipation is killing me. I am terribly fond of crumpets.

□

THAT WALK: The following note arrived in the mail from M. H. Wooliams, owner of Oak Bay Beach Hotel.

"Enclosed please find our cheque for $26, payable to Miles for Millions. We are sorry that you did not complete the walk, but we are paying the full amount because we believe that it was an extremely good cause, and for your very good effort in making it such a success."

It was a good cause but the creidit for the success must go to Bob Taylor and all those young people who inspired the people to get out and become involved. Thanks to Mr. Wooliams for his generous gesture.

□

BIG STARS: Two celebrated ladies will play theatre engagements here soon. Lady Astor is at Victoria high school for two shows Friday and Saturday, and Ramona Henderson will play the McPherson Playhouse Dec. 28 to Jan. 6.

Before anyone gets too excited, perhaps I should explain Lady Astor is the name of the goat in Teahouse of the August Moon, and Ramona is an old English sheepdog who has a part in Bastion Theatre's production of Camelot.

The problem with Ramona is that she is called Horrid in Camelot, and owner Hugh Henderson, who is also in the play, has been teaching her to answer to her stage name.

Mr. Henderson explains, "It is rather an unpleasant name, so we try to use as kind a tone as possible while rehearsing her."

I produced Teahouse of the August Moon some 10 years ago in Vancouver, and our goat ate one of the scripts and a map that was part of the set.

□

YACHTS SHOTS: If you class Jim McVie of Victoria as one of the finest yachting photographers in North America there would be little to argue about. His work has attracted the Coutts Hallmark Company, which put out the calendar of that other fine Victoria artist, Emily Sartain. Last year it was the flower calendar, and now it's the Wind and Sail calendar by Jim McVie that will attract local buyers.

□

THE GAL: Remember when there was the item about Lue Else getting on her glad rags for Chatelaine magazine, and we told you she would be on view this fall?

The pictures now are scheduled for the February issue, which should be on the news racks Jan. 21.

Sense of Smell Can Be Lost Through Cold, Sinus Strain

Your Good Health

By JOSEPH MOLNER, MD

Dear Dr. Molner: I have lost all sense of smell. It is almost impossible to cook without a good smeller. Can anything be done for this, and what caused it? — I.L.L.

Put your questions in the other order, because once you know what caused the loss of smell, you have a better chance of correcting it.

It can happen after a cold, when the nasal membrane is inflamed or swollen, but this usually corrects itself as you get over the cold.

Some types of sinus disease can be present, causing a continuation of the trouble.

Finally, sense of smell may be lost by patients with atrophied rhinitis, a disorder of the nasal membrane which shrinks and dries the tissues. Sometimes administration of female hormones helps this condition.

If chronic infection is the cause, then treatment of the infection is essential. See an ear-nose-throat specialist.

Other than these suggestions, there is no magic formula to restore sense of smell.

Dear Dr. Molner: Why aren't doctors interested in women using intra-uterine devices or plastic coils instead of pills to prevent pregnancy? — Mrs. F.S.

Doctors ARE interested in these devices, called I.U.D.s, but there's a difference between being interested and being convinced that they are the best method. A considerable proportion of women can't tolerate them. There is also the risk of the device being shifted out of proper position. They sound very simple, but in actual practice it's another story, although there are those who would disagree with me — and have.

□

Dear Dr. Molner: I am 14. My mother won't let me wash my hair the first day of my period, but my hair gets very greasy at times and my period is irregular so I can't plan in advance. Our school nurse says it is all right to wash your hair the first day. Do you agree?—B.C.

My advice is to wash your hair when it is necessary. And when you have daughters, don't keep the old nonsense going. Let them wash their hair whenever it needs it.

Policy Split Shown

SAIGON (UPI) — South Vietnam Tuesday said it would "resolutely disapprove" Viet Cong participation in a United Nations debate on the Vietnam war. The statement was in direct opposition to America's position on the proposed debate and represented a major split between South Vietnamese and U.S. policy.

A South Vietnamese foreign ministry communique said, "The government of (South) Vietnam can only negotiate with the North Vietnamese and will resoutely disapprove the presence of the National Liberation Front representatives as a separate party in any peace negotiations."

'NEVER RECOGNIZED'

On Saturday, state department officials in Washington said the U.S. would not block the invitation of Viet Cong envoys to a UN Security Council session on the war. The NLF is the political arm of the Viet Cong.

Tran Van Do, foreign minister of South Vietnam, said the Saigon government "has never recognized the National Liberation Front as a political party, or even as simply a party."

Dr. Spock Protest 'Big Zero'

NEW YORK (AP) — More than 1,000 shouting demonstrators against U.S. involvement in the Vietnam war tried vainly to close a Lower Manhattan armed forces induction centre Tuesday.

More than 260 of them deliberately had themselves arrested, including Dr. Benjamin Spock, noted baby doctor, and beat poet Allen Ginsberg.

The ranks of the protesters included the young and the old, hippies and businessmen.

Lt.-Col. James J. McPoland, commander of the Whitehall army induction centre, called the five-hour anti-war demonstration "a big zero."

NO INTERRUPTION

McPoland said there was no interruption in the centre's daily processing schedule of 250 inductees.

Sponsors of the demonstration had hoped to attract 5,000 or more protesters.

Grace Paley, a sponsor of the demonstration, claimed police clubbed some demonstrators with nightsticks and charged on horseback. Officers had been ordered to protect the constitutional rights of the protesters, but also had "a clear mandate to act when action is needed."

MAYOR SATISFIED

Mayor John Lindsay said he was satisfied with police handling of the demonstration.

The New York picketing and civil disobedience was part of a "Stop the Draft Week," featuring demonstrations beginning Monday in many U.S. cities.

In New Haven, Conn., a Yale University chaplain tried unsuccessfully to hand over a batch of documents, described as draft cards and other military papers, to the FBI office there. Acceptance was refused. Forty-eight persons had turned in the documents Monday during a demonstration by about 1,100 war protesters.

EATON RELATIVE

Some 50 bearded, long-haired demonstrators carrying banners staged a silent vigil in Wilmington, Ohio, in support of James R. Wessner Jr., who refused to report for induction there Tuesday as directed. A graduate student at the University of California, Wessner is married to a granddaughter of Cleveland Industrialist Cyrus Eaton, a native of Nova Scotia who is himself a critic of U.S. actions in Vietnam.

The New York protest was sponsored by the "Stop the Draft Week Committee," which claimed support from some 50 anti-war and civil rights groups. Spock, a leading critic of the Vietnam war, was among those listed as an individual sponsor of the demonstration.

Spock said last week that he planned to seek arrest during Tuesday's rally here.

He was arreigned and then released for a later hearing on a disorderly conduct charge.

Red Mugwumps Under Fire For Opposing Summit Meet

MOSCOW (UPI) — The Kremlin Tuesday denied it was seeking to outlaw Peking from the Communist world and rebuked fence-straddlers opposed to its call for a world Communist summit to discuss the "difficulties" within the Red camp.

A major article in the Communist party newspaper Pravda did not identify the fence sitters. But Romania and Yugoslavia have balked at any such conference.

Observers said the article, written by a political analyst Vitaly Korionov and obviously approved at a high party level, was designed to build an overwhelming anti-Chinese consensus at February's scheduled "consultative" conference in Budapest.

Some Communist sources, however, said the Kremlin's "hard - sell" approach could backfire and actually frighten away some of the wavering parties rather than win recruits for its anti-Peking propaganda campaign.

The article came little more than a week after an 18-party call for the Budapest "consultative" meeting which the Kremlin was believed seeking to pave the way for the world Communist summit.

"It would be unrealistic to believe that the difficulties which exist in the Communist movement would vanish by themselves . . ." Korionov wrote. "Energetic and powerful efforts by all fraternal parties are needed to overcome these difficulties."

New Home Recipe Reducing Plan

It's simple how quickly one may lose pounds of unsightly fat right in your own home. Make this home recipe yourself. It's easy, no trouble at all and costs little. Just go to your drug store and ask for four ounces of Naran Concentrate. Pour this into a pint bottle and add enough grapefruit juice to fill the bottle. Take two tablespoons full a day as needed and follow the Naran Plan.

If your first purchase does not show you a simple easy way to lose bulky fat and help regain slender more graceful curves; if reducible pounds and inches of excess fat don't disappear from neck, chin, arms, abdomen, hips, calves and ankles just return the empty bottle for your money back. Follow this easy way endorsed by many who have tried this plan and help bring back alluring curves and graceful slenderness. Note how quickly bloat disappears—how much better you feel. More alive, youthful appearing and active.

UN Discussion of Vietnam

U.S. Agreeable to Debate

From UPI, Reuters, AP

The United States is willing to have a UN Security Council debate on Vietnam in a search for peace, the U.S. state department said Tuesday in Washington.

Officials said privately that U.S. ambassador Arthur Goldberg will soon seek resumption of the debate which was broken off nearly two years ago when France and Russia objected to the Security Council taking up the issue.

Publicly, department spokesman Robert McCloskey told newsmen "We are still willing to have the subject discussed."

SENATE ACTION

The new U.S. move was spurred by Senate passage of a resolution last week urging UN action.

Asked about the resolution which called on President Johnson to initiate new UN action, McCloskey commented that the U.S. "a long time ago" sought such a debate and has "not in any way hedged on it."

But he emphasized that such a session "was not possible because of the attitude taken by the other side."

CONG ATTACK

A Saigon report says a Viet Cong guerilla battalion with grenades and flame throwers ravaged a South Vietnamese village in the central highlands near the Cambodian frontier Tuesday. About 50 casualties were listed in unconfirmed reports from the scene.

About 400 guerrillas moved in early morning darkness into Dak Song, a "New Life" hamlet about 130 miles northeast of Saigon.

NO REASON

The "New Life" hamlets are government - sponsored settlements ordinarily formidable targets for any Communist forays. The people of Dak Song as most of those in South Vietnams' mountain villages, apparently are Montagnards, tribal groups which sometimes fight the Viet Cong as irregulars under the direction of U.S. advisers.

Wilson said information he had received so far gave no indication why the hamlet had been attacked.

A senior official of the South Vietnam National Liberation Front, political arm of the Viet Cong, said Tuesday in Paris it will set up a press office in Paris.

UN Peace Force

From UPI, AP

UNITED NATIONS — The Security Council is planning to authorize an extension of only one month for the presence of a UN peace force on Cyprus while negotiations continue with Cypriot President Makarios, diplomatic sources reported Tuesday.

The mandate for the 4,500-man force expires Dec. 26. It has been renewed for six-month periods, with provision for financing it by voluntary contributions, since its creation in 1964.

After extending the mandate, probably next week, the Security Council will have to tackle the problem of broadening the force's function in line with U Thant's proposals.

No schedule for these council meetings has yet been announced and speculation ranged from "within the next week" to a date around Dec. 15.

In Ankara, Prime Minister Demiral said Tuesday Turkey retained the right to intervene in Cyprus if Turkish Cypriots are threatened again by Greeks on the island, which he described as a "warehouse of weapons."

In Washington, Cyrus Vance, President Johnson's troubleshooter in the Cyprus crisis, submitted what is described as a brief and preliminary report to State Secretary Rusk.

Who Dares?

PRIME MINISTER Harold Wilson's quiet reply to General de Gaulle's latest rebuff of Britain's application to join the European Common Market has earned him considerable praise in unexpected quarters at home and abroad.

Hailing Mr. Wilson's gentle reminder to the French president that Britain's debts were incurred in the fight to make Europe free, The Times of London says that the British leader found exactly the right tone and the right message.

The prime minister, it writes, corrected the errors and misrepresentations without rancour or heat, and reaffirmed Britain's intention of fighting on until the ideal of a united Europe is realized. "Long term objectives," it continues, "must always take precedence over tactical advantages or the joys of polemic. By dwelling on his vision of a wider European community, with a single economic and technological base, fully independent and capable of playing its destined role in the world, Mr. Wilson showed himself a better European than General de Gaulle."

The Conservative Daily Mail also paid tribute to the Labor prime minister but thought he should have gone further: "He could have said that there would be no free France, no President de Gaulle, no European Community, had not Britain spent her all in blood and treasure to secure such things in two world wars. He could have added that the French attack on the dollar is poor recompense for what was done by the dollar—through Marshall aid—to bring life back to France when she was down and out . . ."

The Scotsman, no great supporter of Mr. Wilson's policies, takes a deeper look at the prime minister's speech. "What Mr. Wilson said," it writes, "ought to strengthen the resolve of the European Commission to stand firm on their recommendation that negotiations with Britain should be opened. The expectation must also be that his statement will have influence on France's partners. The arena has not been left to the French president. And Mr. Wilson's observations should make it plain that the way is virtually open to a great addition to the political and economic strength of the Common Market."

Only time will tell if the Edinburgh newspaper's view that Mr. Wilson's speech will have an impact upon France's European partners is justified or simply wishful thinking.

Though, as the Scotsman says, the arena has not been left to the French president, few seem willing to share it with him at the moment.

A Live Spirit

ONCE again the Colonist 500 fund is proving to the cynics that the spirit of Christmas is far from dead.

This year as in previous years the response to this annual appeal for brightening the homes of those in need underlines in no uncertain way the desire of our readers to share their festive cheer with those less fortunate than themselves.

Whatever changes new philosophies and values have brought us in recent years, Santa Claus seems to have survived.

Breath-Test Law

COMPARED with British Columbia's roadside breath-test law which gives drinking drivers a way out of trouble unless they are so obviously impaired as to warrant arrest, Britain's new breath-test rule is severe. But its severity appears to be producing remarkable results.

In the British Columbia version, a motorist suspected of having had more to drink than he should may have his driver's licence immediately suspended for 24 hours unless he chooses to take the breath test and the results show him fit to drive. Either way, that's the end of it.

The fact that very few suspects wish to take the test is proof, however, that the police have a good eye for the impaired driver and that many in that condition are getting away with no further penalty than the brief loss of their cars. Mr. Ray Hadfield, superintendent of motor vehicles, says that of 2,000 suspects suspended since the program began earlier this year, fewer than 125 have asked to take the test.

In Britain since October 9, the police may give roadside tests and if a driver refuses a test, or if the breath test results are adverse, he can be taken to a station and asked to take a blood and urine test. If he refuses this test he can be fined up to £50 for refusing, and it will count as evidence against him on a charge of drunk driving for which he can be disqualified from driving for a year, fined up to £100 and jailed for four months.

There are those who complain that this law is unduly harsh and that it invades civil liberties by virtually compelling drivers to give evidence against themselves. Weighed against the results on the roads, however, the debatable loss of civil rights would seem to be far more than equalled by the gain in public well-being. Scotland Yard reports a 42 per cent drop in night-time accidents in London in the first month since the law went into effect. If this achievement is sustained, it will argue loudly for a similar law in this country.

Marking the Day

HON. J. A. MacLean (Queens): On behalf of the many members of this house of Scottish extraction and therefore, momentarily, a self appointed spokesman for one of the two great founding races of this country . . . I should like to ask the prime minister whether it is his intention this session to introduce legislation which would eliminate the odious anomaly whereby the house sits on the feast day of the patron saint of one of these two great races, while on the festive day of the other we adjourn.

Right Hon. L. B. Pearson (prime minister): We on this side of the house are paying a very special tribute to the patron saint of Scotland, Saint Andrew, by bringing down a budget today.

"And as a token of our appreciation . . ."

An Overwhelming Contrast

The Good Fortune of the British

By PATRICK O'DONOVAN from London

MIDDLE-class people quit Britain for five chief reasons. These can be listed as money, lust for the sun, political spleen, the sort of snobbery that Arthur Koestler described as "French 'flu," the compulsion to find a place where a man can aspire to live like a gentleman.

All of these are fundamentally ignoble in varying degrees. There are others like work, or a genuine love affair with a country because its way of life fits some personal eccentricity or because its beauty and the pleasure of the company of its people is more intense than that gained by consorting with the British. These of course must be accepted.

But as far as I am concerned, none of them yet seems valid. Just back from one of those intellectually indefensible and dizzy tours around the Middle East in which the journalist must snap away at impressions like an old box Brownie, I have been confirmed, not only in my stubborn preference for these islands, but also in my conviction of our stunning good fortune. It may sound odd to write such a thing so soon after the devaluation crisis.

In most of these countries of the Middle East, in Greece, say, and Iran, Jordan and even Malta and in many others, there exists a two-party system. On one side there are those in power or who are comfortable in the shade of power. On the other there are those who want, at almost any cost, to take their place.

Between them is a dialogue of hatred and barely suppressed violence. Setting their hatreds and convictions and fears and repressions one upon the other, they have built exclusive towers round which the countless majority, the poor, find little shelter and inadequate hope.

In these and in innumerable other lands, life is lived even by the favored inside the towers with the most self-conscious circumspection.

Even if there is no censorship, people must pick and choose their public words and, in private, pick and choose their interlocutors. And everyone, inside or outside the tower, lives under the threat of total disorganization. Stability comes from autocracy. Security comes from a foreign bank account. Safety comes from picking the winning side. And silence, patience and strong shutters on the windows represent the wisest if not the most rewarding line of conduct.

These wild generalizations were engendered, not by any close inspection of Britain's behavior in a time of financial crisis, but by a visit to the Oxford Union.

This famous debating society, this seed bed for politicians, the higher clergy, for lawyers and journalists, is of course said to be in sad decline. It has given up the youthful pursuit of wit and excitement and abandoned itself to barren middle-aged partisan passions. There was no sign of it last week.

The motion "That there is no place for the Catholic Church in the 20th century" was offensive to a sizeable minority and was the sort of pantechnicon issue that in different forms can cause riots. In addition one of the two guests was the Rev. Ian Paisley, the Belfast ultra-Protestant leader, and to oppose him utterly is as automatic for a liberal as is support for abortion, the pill, the abolition of the death penalty and homosexual law reform. It comes into the same undemanding and intellectual and emotional category.

And yet, though the student audience laughed at Mr. Paisley's extravagances and sat in shocked silence when he whipped out an unconsecrated Host and brandished it and reviled it—and then broke into a great slow chilling roar of "Shame"—they also shushed the more ebullient Catholics.

They were packed into the angular chamber and yet, deeply attentive and surprisingly involved, they sat out the hours of muddled or brilliant rhetoric and they heard out the case for both sides. The House of Commons does not now behave with such dignity or with such exciting high spirits when their feelings are aroused.

And yet many of the members of the Oxford Union were the long-haired, the tight-trousered and the exhibitionist who are said to be incapable of such self-restraint.

A bad joke or a lapse into real intolerance or brutal discourtesy to Mr. Paisley were all greeted by the clear and rather daunting disapproval of this house. The Reverend won no hearts, indeed his terrible 16th-century hatreds and his extravagant invective lost the motion, but he gained a sort of respect and he was heard.

★ ★ ★

There was a group of wild-eyed Irishmen come down from London to make things hot for their enemy. But even these, who knew nothing of the university and had no business there, were silenced by the tolerance of the house. And it was not the tolerance of indifference. I thought it a great occasion and an occasion for a little of the old British complacency about ourselves. And the contrast with what I have been seeing, however fleetingly, in the last several weeks, was overwhelming.

For Russian Intelligentsia

A Guide to the Outside World

By DEV MURARKA from Moscow

THE intensity of the Soviet intelligentsia's interest in the outside world is matched only by its difficulty in getting accurate information about it. The Soviet press, for the most part, keeps within the bounds of official thinking about what is happening abroad.

The fleeting words of foreign broadcasts are no substitute for detailed information in black and white. But the average Soviet citizen cannot subscribe to foreign newspapers from the non-Communist world very easily. Access to such journals is limited to those working for institutions dealing with foreign affairs, like the offices of newspapers and magazines, and some of the research institutes.

For this reason, the weekly paper Za Rubezhom (Life Abroad) occupies a unique position in Russia today. No Soviet citizen interested in the world beyond the frontiers can do without it. The success of Za Rubezhom comes from the fact that nearly 80 per cent of its material is reproduced from items in the foreign press, mostly the non-Communist Western press.

Three-quarters of a million copies of the paper are sold every week within a few hours of its publication, on Fridays. It is a tabloid (13 inches by 10 inches) with 32 pages per issue, with solid and serious content except for some cartoons and a last page of humor. Quite often the humor page reproduces features by Art Buchwald.

A typical issue will carry a number of translations from papers like The Times, le Monde, New York Times, le Figaro, Die Zeit and others. The current issue, for instance, reprints an article from le Figaro on Siberia, a number of pages about West Germany's policies towards the German question and strong commentary on Chancellor Kiesinger's tour of South Asia. A special three-page feature deals with the coverage of the October Revolution's jubilee celebrations in the world press. There are also pages dealing with developments in the field of space exploration.

The cartoon on the front page of the current issue — there is always a cartoon on the front page — is reproduced from the Morning Star, the London Communist paper, showing British Prime Minister Harold Wilson carrying a bag marked "political economy" which is shrinking year by year.

The material is, of course, very carefully edited. The articles reproduced are often pruned so that they do not give a picture contrary to the official version. But all the same a great variety of factual material is there which cannot easily be found elsewhere in the Soviet press.

For this reason Za Rubezhom is the intelligent Soviet man's guide to the outside world, and tells him what the world is saying and thinking about the current events. The material produced is often of first-rate quality, although there is also place for the less well-known papers from Asia and elsewhere, and for the Communist papers.

There is also original material written in the editorial office, mostly commentary abroad for Pravda and Izvestia, or even specialists in their field whose pieces go beyond the strictly-cautious line of their own papers. On the more significant events and crises, these articles in Za Rubezhom are often pointers of what Soviet thinking is on a given subject without committing the party or the government in any way. It is often reflected later in the more official organs.

Two notable instances of this in recent times were a series of articles on the troubles in Indonesia, reproduced from foreign papers, as well as written by Soviet specialists, which laid the facts before the Russian public. Then, during the Middle East crisis, there were special articles, particularly by the head of Pravda's Afro-Asian department, Igor Belyaev, which exposed an under-current of criticism of some of the Arab failings which could not be voiced elsewhere in the Soviet press.

Za Rubezhom thus performs a special task for its readers and for them its value could not be overestimated. But it is interesting to note that the example of Za Rubezhom, which has been in existence for seven years, has been followed elsewhere. In Poland a magazine called Forum is run on the same lines. For students of Soviet affairs it is becoming increasingly valuable to be able to find some of the missing links in the raison d'etre of Soviet policies.

Today in History

Testimony at the Nuernberg trials 22 years ago today—in 1945—indicated that Mussolini had tried in 1939 to persuade Hitler to postpone war in Europe.

1817—The Treaty of Constantinople was signed.

1914—Britain declared war on Finland, Hungary and Romania.

First World War: Fifty years ago today—in 1917—the French freighter Mont Blanc loaded with TNT collided with the Belgian relief ship Imo in Halifax harbor with an explosion that wrecked the north part of the city, killing 1,000 persons. The blast, which broke windows in Truro 50 miles away, also injured 6,000, left 10,000 homeless and caused $35,000,000 worth of property damage.

Second World War: Twenty-five years ago today—in 1942—Allied planes attacked railways at Sfax and Sousse, Tunisia; Kweilim in Kiangsi province was bombed by 31 Japanese planes; about 200 Allied planes made a sweeping daylight attack over occupied western Europe from the North Sea to the Bay of Biscay.

Seven-Year Battle

Mr. McNamara Concedes

By PHILIP DEANE

ROBERT Strange McNamara, the best U.S. defence secretary in history, according to many, is leaving the cabinet because in his fight against military brass, he has lost the support of Lyndon B. Johnson. And so, Mr. McNamara admits defeat in his seven-year battle to curb the "military-industrial" complex against which Dwight D. Eisenhower warned his countrymen on laying down office.

★ ★ ★

The military-industrial complex is the interlocking alliance of gun-merchants and generals who on retiring from the forces enter the board rooms of the arms factories. Many generals know in advance they will become directors of munitions plants — they have the appointment letter in their pocket long before retiring. This is not to suggest that the generals cynically escalate the arms race for the sake of profits they will make in their retirement.

One need not even suggest that the gun-merchants themselves, who will hire the generals, espouse escalation purely for economic reasons. Nor is such the case with labor union leaders who want defence production plants working at full blast, congressmen who want their districts enriched by such plants, university presidents who lobby for defence research funds to maintain a blue ribbon faculty of major brains.

All these people are patriots. They are convinced they are doing the right thing for their country. Robert McNamara's virtue was to understand that such convictions are more easily developed where they coincide with self-interest. He also understood that given an inch, the combination of patriotic conviction and profit will always take a mile.

He said as much repeatedly in the many years of his resistance against the building of an antiballistic missile network which he believes to be useless and in this belief he is supported by the best independent analysts of defence problems, like Dr. Jerome Wiesner, the former scientific adviser to the White House.

★ ★ ★

Five years ago, the military-industrial complex wanted to spend billions and billions on an antimissile system called the Nike Zeus. It is now conceded that the Nike Zeus would have been obsolete and useless from the first day because its characteristics were known to the enemy (there are only a few ways in which antimissiles can work) and the enemy immediately redesigned his attack to neutralize Nike Zeus. The same will happen to the new antimissiles that will now be built. These are supposed to be a thin line, guarding only a few cities. Eager senators are already predicting everyone's city will get the business benefits of an antimissile base.

On Vietnam, for "industrial-military complex" read "hawks," who have always promised that escalation will bring victory. It never has and they have blamed McNamara for limiting each escalation step. Well, he won't be there to limit now.

Crowded Heavens

From The Ottawa Journal

THE Commons Broadcasting Committee, for once giving the CBC a rest, has been spending some time on what might be called the technical sections of the Broadcasting Bill. Great things are in train in broadcasting. John Baldwin, the transport deputy minister, told the committee Canada would require a couple of satellites in space to look after her domestic needs in future and she also had to arrange for her share of ultra high frequency channels for television.

Up until now space has seemed limitless and the air seems empty, but when experts begin speaking of future communications the heavens appear crowded. Besides, outer space doesn't seem so distant when the proposed legislation says that no one without a licence may establish a radio station or install radio apparatus on any spacecraft under Canadian direction or control. Whether we would send Mounted Police up there to apprehend broadcast smugglers opens up a question of thrilling possibilities.

Prevention Cheaper

I WAS so glad to see Dr. Alan Austin's article in the November 19 "Islander" as I had heard him speak at the McPherson Theatre, on the subject of the Gorge and Portage Inlet, and I had found his talk very interesting. It is a tragedy and a disgrace, that we allow such things to take place, as the despoliation of the Gorge and Portage Inlet.

Prevention would be much cheaper, and healthier; but it seems that only the minority sees ahead, and this minority is seldom heeded.

Fifty years ago Yellowstone Park was designated a federal park — the first in the world, and one of the most beautiful and interesting places to go. Now it is almost ruined. Motor boats have been allowed on Yellowstone Lake, and most of the birds that were there have gone, and wild animals that came to drink or swim, have largely disappeared.

Peter Farb, writing in the Christian Science Monitor describes how this sanctuary for wild life has been compromised. The wolf is gone, the coyotes are being hunted also, and are decreasing, and bears are often shot.

Dr. Austin says he hopes that he "won't be around when our wild places and wilderness and parks are gone." He need not worry, he won't be around, neither will the rest of us! We cannot survive once the wild places are destroyed.

Richard St. Barbe Baker, founder of Men of the Trees, says, "Of the earth's 30 billion acres, already nine billion are desert. We look at it this way: plastic surgeons tell us that if a man loses one third of his skin, he dies. As a botanist and arboriculturist, I know that if a tree loses one third of its bark it dies. I, therefore submit that if the earth loses one third of its green mantle of trees and other healthy vegetation, it too, will die, the water-table will sink beyond recall, and life on this planet will become impossible."

We are destroying our environment at an ever increasing pace — how long can we survive?

The few who have been working for years to save the Gorge, and redeem it, have made some gains. More power to them.

MRS. EVE SMITH,
South Pender Island.

The Big Walk

I would like to express my gratitude to all the people who gave of their time to help make Miles for Millions successful. A number of service clubs, car clubs, and individuals helped to man the check points. The civil defence at every level was outstanding. St. John's Ambulance was at hand all along the route. The news media helped to make the thing a success by publicizing it and CFAX radio and its staff donated considerable time and money to coordinate all these personnel and to offer aid and service to the marchers and the community on the day of the March.

The civic authorities in all the municipalities were extremely friendly and co-operative and the militia helped to transport tired walkers.

All of these people and organizations helped to keep the effort running smoothly and I'm sure I can speak for the community in thanking them sincerely for their fine efforts.

An Insult

On Sunday, Nov. 26 the Nanaimo Centennial Museum was opened. The attendant ceremonies were marred by the deliberate insult to Mr. Dave Stupich, MLA for Nanaimo. When something as important to the citizens of Nanaimo as the opening of an historical museum occurs, it seems common courtesy on the part of those in charge of arrangements to invite the MLA to attend. Mr. Stupich did not receive an invitation; and when he attended as a private citizen, the only speaker to even acknowledge his presence was Mr. Lawrie Wallace, B.C. Centennial chairman.

If this were a single incident, it could be excused as an unfortunate mistake; but this was only the latest in a series of calculated moves to slight Mr. Stupich, the office he holds, and through that office the people of Nanaimo who elected him.

Gold

I was much interested in your editorial entitled Power Play in Gold.

The odd thing about gold, over the past quarter century, has been that although economic theory has suggested it to be a relatively useless commodity and an outmoded monetary base, its desirability in the eyes of hard-headed bankers, harder-headed hoarders, and the general public has continued to increase. So much so, in fact, that it commands a premium on the unofficial markets, and the bulk of the entire world production now disappears each year into unknown hands.

Whatever school of economics one may favor, it seems a piece of arrant economic nonsense for Canada not to make full use of her available resources for the production of a commodity so obviously attractive and readily exportable.

V. H. PATRIARCHE.

Thanks In Order

Instead of cussing de Gaulle we ought to thank him, and thank God for animating him to stop Britain from joining the European Common Market. It would be Britain's death as a sovereign nation if she joined — and maybe his interference into Canadian affairs will drive the French Canadians, who are after all mostly from Norman and Breton stock, and therefore closely akin to Anglo-Saxondom, if only they knew it, back into the Canadian fold, rather than risk joining up with the volatile, unpredictable French nation under de Gaulle's leadership. Hats off to the old warrior.

One-Way Streets

Hooray for little ole Victoria! Some "brains" in the traffic controlling division have it all figured out for the Christmas rush. They gave us a one-way street — View Street — for six weeks' time. Why not 10 or 12 one-way streets all year 'round?

Sweden changed the driving habits of a nation from left to right but I guess they have nothing on us.

Calculating Johnson Widens His Options

McNamara Political Liability

By JOSEPH KRAFT, from Washington

President Johnson's nomination of Defence Secretary Robert McNamara to head the World Bank is an incident which takes on high importance only against a certain background.

That certain background is not merely, and maybe not even mainly, Vietnam. The truly relevant background is the crumbling of power in Washington and the inevitable search by a president thus beset for new alternatives and wider options.

★ ★ ★

The Democratic coalition which has basically dominated the United States since 1936 is now falling apart. Not simply in the superficial way which made possible the largely personal victory of President Eisenhower in 1952. It is falling apart in a way which suggests 1968 may be a landmark election — an election like those in 1860, or 1896, or 1932 where power passed decisively from one party to another.

Of the five principal elements comprising the Democratic coalition, the South has been slipping away for years. The intellectuals have been put off by Johnson's foreign policy, notably Vietnam, and by his personality.

★ ★ ★

The Negroes, the trade unions and the big city organizations remain basically loyal to the Democratic Party. But the Negroes are an increasingly unpopular minority. And for a variety of reasons the trade unions and city organizations are institutions in decline.

In this situation, a president — any president — is bound to look for new alternatives, and to weigh up assets and debits in a cold, calculating way. And despite his unique services, Robert McNamara does not at this time, in this job, look to this president as an overwhelming asset. On the contrary, he looks like a potential liability.

★ ★ ★

To begin with, Secretary McNamara does not do anything for President Johnson with labor and the Negroes. Neither does he do all that much for the president with the intellectuals.

On the contrary, things have played out in a way that gives the secretary of defence such credit as there is for restraining the Vietnamese war. That means the credit for restraint has not been going to Johnson.

With respect to the potential liabilities there are two. The crumbling of power may tempt other Democrats to try to arrest the decline of their party by unhorsing the president in favor of Sen. Robert Kennedy.

Nobody who knows Secretary McNamara and the strong loyalty and sense of honor and duty which inspires him, would imagine that he would quit with a splash to help Senator Kennedy. But it is possible, barely possible, that President Johnson would believe such a thing.

The second potential liability seems to me far more important. If Johnson does want to undertake some new departures in Vietnam, either on the war side or the peace side, Secretary McNamara is a distinct embarrassment.

★ ★ ★

On the war side, McNamara would be apt to resist, maybe even to the point of a resignation bound to create enormous stir in the country, any significant intensification of violence.

Even if the intention were merely a refurbishing of the administration on the domestic front, the prospective retirement of the secretary of defence would serve a purpose. For with the star of the cabinet on the way out, the ouster of lesser men can hardly rouse a great storm.

He can, if he wants, keep McNamara on at the Pentagon, postponing the final appointment to the World Bank until after the election. On the other hand, if he wants to change policies, he can push the secretary out in a way that causes minimum fuss. McNamara is, in effect, in the cooler.

To be sure, those of us who have admired the secretary of defence for his supreme service to the state, not to mention his charm and generosity as a person, find the way Johnson has handled the World Bank nomination exceedingly unpleasant.

★ ★ ★

To make the nomination without even letting the secretary of defence know about it, expresses a want of consideration and feeling which verges on the indecent.

But to say that is only to underline a point that is, alas, already too well known. The point is that Lyndon Johnson is president. And Lyndon Johnson behaves the way Lyndon Johnson behaves.

BACKGROUND

'Masterly Evasion' Strengthens Hand

Makarios Again Emerges As Big Winner in Cyprus

By CARL MOLLINS, From London

Archbishop Makarios, president of Cyprus, has managed to stall off attempts to tackle his island country's civil-war troubles at the roots.

A 12-day whirligig of international diplomacy, actively cheered on by Canada, has ended the immediate threat of an invasion of Cyprus by Turkey to protect the Turkish-Cypriot minority against Greek and Greek-Cypriot forces.

★ ★ ★

But strenuous efforts to widen the settlement by getting pledges of Cypriot disarmament under a stronger peacekeeping mandate for United Nations forces have been balked by the president's stonewalling — what one diplomat has called "the usual Makarios policy of masterly evasion."

The bearded prelate appeared to wear out even the apparently-tireless Cyprus Vance, the United States peace envoy who spent bewildering hours in the presidential palace at Nicosia trying to pin down Makarios.

★ ★ ★

As a result, the settlement boils down to an agreement between Greece and Turkey — the former to withdraw its estimated 12,000 regular troops from Cyprus while Turkey dismantles its invasion force.

The Turkish-Cypriot minority remains locked up in its beleaguered enclaves. The 4,500-man, six-country UN peace force on Cyprus is as inhibited now as it was three weeks ago when it failed to prevent the Greek massacre of Turkish-Cypriots at Kophinou Village.

In fact, the settlement has strengthened the Makarios government's hand in advance of horse-trading at the United Nations in New York. Makarios has shaken off the hegemony of Athens. His rival Gen. George Grivas has gone to Greece and most of the Greek troops will follow.

The Makarios appeal for a UN pledge to protect Cyprus is designed to undermine Turkey's right under the 1960 independence treaty to intervene in Cyprus if Turkish-Cypriot minority rights are threatened.

★ ★ ★

His proposal for demilitarization — disarmament of all island forces built up since the last crisis four years ago — would restore the situation of 1963, when he repudiated the independence agreements establishing Turkish minority rights.

Makarios has achieved what a Nicosia diplomat earlier predicted he was after. The parts of the Vance peace package likely to affect Cyprus politics have been diverted to the UN talk-shop in New York.

On the basis of his experience of UN methods since the peacekeeping force was established in 1964, Makarios may well believe he has a better chance of getting his way with the world organization than he would have done against the Turkish Army.

The UN role in Cyprus has been progressively eroded since 1964. Makarios has seen all parties to the Cyprus dispute violate UN peacekeeping regulations with impunity, whether in the illegal expansion of armed forces and fortifications or restrictions on the UN forces freedom of movement in the island.

Suddenly I Lost My Memory!

A noted publisher in Chicago reports there is a simple technique for acquiring a powerful memory which can pay you real dividends in both business and social advancement and works like magic to give you added poise, necessary self-confidence and greater popularity.

According to this publisher, many people do not realize how much they could influence others simply by remembering accurately everything they see, hear, or read. Whether in business, at social functions or even in casual conversations with new acquaintances, there are ways in which you can dominate each situation by your ability to remember.

To acquaint the readers of this paper with the easy-to-follow rules for developing skill in remembering anything you choose to remember, the publishers have printed full details of their self-training method in a new booklet, "Adventures in Memory," which will be mailed free to anyone who requests it. No obligation. Send your name and address to: Memory Studies, 835 Diversey Parkway, Dept. 142-210, Chicago, Ill. 60614. A postcard will do.

Nation Braced for Long War

By AMANDO DORONILA

Amando Doronila, diplomatic correspondent of the Manila Times Publishing Co., recently visited North Vietnam for a month, during which time he travelled extensively throughout the country. He found the North Vietnamese have learned to accept, to some degree, the air war over the North and that they are being conditioned to a long conflict.

At cock's crow every week day, factory and office workers in North Vietnam's capital of Hanoi assemble in courtyards for 15 minutes of mass calisthenics.

This is one way North Vietnam is bracing its people for what their leaders call the "supreme sacrifice" of a "long war."

★ ★ ★

There is little question the North Vietnamese have conditioned themselves for a war which Hanoi predicts may last from 10 to 20 years.

Grim words are heard — and apparently taken seriously by the Hanoi regime and the people — about a possible U.S. invasion above the 17th parallel that has divided Vietnam into North and South since the 1954 Geneva agreements.

★ ★ ★

Of the 17,000,000 persons in North Vietnam, 10,000,000 are between the ages of one and 30. Four million are between 15 and 30. The cream of the youth serve in the army and the militia.

All those able to bear arms are issued rifles and are given intensive training in guerrilla tactics. Regular training camps are hidden in villages and mountains.

Industries and population have been disperesed in small units throughout the countryside, not only as a safeguard against U.S. bombers but to serve the purpose of the "people's war" in which the entire population would be involved, along with the "people's army."

Hanoi and Haiphong have thickets of anti-aircraft fortifications. Almost every building above two storeys has some sort of machine-gun nest manned by militia.

★ ★ ★

Hanoi-based diplomats estimate there are 8,000 anti-aircraft units in North Vietnam — concentrated largely in Hanoi and Haiphong — of which 5,000 are equipped with Chinese weapons and 3,000 with Soviet weapons.

The Soviet-supplied surface-to-air missile units are mobile.

★ ★ ★

U.S. air attacks have forced the North Vietnamese to adopt a somewhat mole-like existence, concealing themselves by day and working at night.

Concealed factories, oil and petrol dumps operate full blast.

Production is stressed as much as fighting, although the army is reported to be the preference of many youths, some of whom are said to have signed their applications in blood.

★ ★ ★

Next to weapons, the most prized pieces of equipment are lorries, rail stock and small generators. These last, imported largely from Eastern European countries, are used to run factories whose main sources of power have been bombed out. Every factory and shop I visited had a standby generator in case the big thermal plants are knocked out.

★ ★ ★

Human labor is also brought into play in the countryside, particularly in the Red River Delta which encompasses 11 of North Vietnam's 30 provinces and raises most of the country's rice. An intricate dike system keeps the water level in the river in check during the July-September monsoon season.

Every household in the delta keeps slabs of earth on reserve for use by the dike brigades.

Every measure is being taken to avert epidemics. Rescue and medical treatment after bombings is prompt and bodies are quickly removed from debris.

Probably Hanoi's most delicate problem is handling of its main allies, China and the Soviet Union, in the midst of the ideological war between the two.

★ ★ ★

I did not see any Chinese in Hanoi except diplomats, whereas Russian technicians, training the Vietnamese in the use of sophisticated weapons and machines, were in evidence.

Diplomats estimate 50,000 Chinese technicians are working in the northern part of North Vietnam, to keep supply routes from China open.

But these diplomats are convinced the Hanoi government does not permit either the Chinese or the Russians to man guns against the "enemy."

★ ★ ★

A diplomat put it this way: "The Vietnamese do not want to internationalize the war. The Chinese could overrun their country. If they allow the Russians and the Chinese to meddle in their war, the Vietnamese would no longer be in a position to decide how to fight their war and where to fight it."

Break out the frosty bottle, boys, and keep your gin drinks dry!

Compromise Advocated

LONDON (AP)—British trade union leaders appealed Tuesday night to locomotive engineers to accept a compromise agreement and end their go-slow strike that has tied up much of southern England's railway traffic since midnight Sunday night.

The appeal came at a meeting between executives of the Associated Society of Locomotive Engineers and Firemen, which called the strike, and top officials of the Trade Unions Congress, which represents all organized labor in Britain.

RIVAL UNIONISTS

One of Associated Society's chief complaints is that the nationalized railways did not consult the union before placing brakemen on the rear platforms of Associated Society-manned locomotives. The brakemen are members of the big rival National Union of Railwaymen, which the Associated Society fears will swallow it.

The engineers started its "work-to-rule" at midnight Sunday night. Its members refused to move locomotives in which empty seats had been assigned to brakemen who are members of the Associated Society's giant rival, the National Union of Railwaymen.

CABOOSE GONE

The British Railways Board has scrapped all cabooses as an economy measure and ordered brakemen into the locomotive cabs.

The engineers' go-slow created less chaos than had been predicted. Only railways in the southern region, which serve much of London's commuter traffic, reported serious delays and train cancellations.

AIR STRIKE THREAT

On another transport trouble front, leaders of the British Airlines Pilots Association said their members still plan to begin a 48 hour strike Friday against the British Overseas Airways Corp.

The union leaders said BOAC is threatening a lockout and a suspension of pilots if the stoppage goes ahead. A spokesman said the threat created a new situation and a stalemate between the union and management.

French Idea Spurned By Britain

LONDON (AP) — Britain spurned French suggestions again Tuesday for a special treaty of association with the European Common Market.

Meeting with Foreign Minister Joseph Luns of The Netherlands, Foreign Secretary George Brown said Britain has applied for full membership of the six-nation trading bloc and is not interested in association as an alternative.

The six Common Market countries are under an obligation, Brown told Luns, to reply with a clear-cut yes or no to the seven-month-old British request for membership.

Diplomats who attended the meeting said Luns fully shared Brown's view that a Common Market answer has to be given.

Stationery Quality Questioned

The Better Business Bureau warned Tuesday telephoned offers of cut-rate office supplies from Montreal should be received with caution.

Bureau managing director W. D. Tindall said a person calling Victoria businessmen from Victoria professes to know a director of the company, or claims he knows a personal friend of the party he has called.

He offers stationery and other supplies at greatly reduced prices. Mr. Tindall said there had been complaints about the quality of the goods.

Seven Municipalities Fighting Pollution

NEW WESTMINSTER (CP) — Seven Lower Mainland municipalities have agreed in principle to a co-operative fight against air pollution, Ald. Doug Stout said Monday.

"We've had numerous talks and they have agreed with the principle of a common bylaw," he said.

Mayor Stuart Gifford identified the councils as New Westminster, Vancouver, Burnaby, Coquitlam, Surrey, Delta and Richmond.

Horse Sale Boycotted

Epizootic Spurs Argentine Ban

LONDON (AP) — Argentine breeders hit back at the British government's ban on meat imports Tuesday with an announcement they will buy no more British thoroughbred horses.

In a message to the Newmarket December Sales, the Argentine Breeders' Association said it had intended to spend $1,000,000 at this week's sales.

Agriculture Minister Fred Peart announced Monday the government had forbidden meat import from countries affected by foot-and-mouth disease — mainly Argentina — in a bid to help check Britain's rampaging epizootic-animal epidemic — which has caused the slaughter of 258,619 animals.

The Argentine decision is a result of the ban, said Col. Robin Hastings of the British Bloodstock Agency, acting on the Latin American's behalf.

Europe's greatest bloodstock auction opened at Newmarket Monday.

Hundreds of horses were withdrawn because of the epidemic and many important Irish buyers stayed away for the same reason.

Two Companies Sue

VANCOUVER (CP) — Two companies Monday launched B.C. Supreme Court actions against Local 580 of the Retail, Wholesale and Department Store Employees Union.

U.S. Borax and Chemical Corp. and Shepparton Preserving Co. are suing the union following its strike against Canada Rice Mills Ltd. and Martin and Robertson Ltd.

U.S. Borax says the union attempted to persuade people not to deal in or handle its products.

Pending Car Agreement Similar to Other Two

DETROIT (UPI) — General Motors Corp. and the United Auto Workers said Tuesday they were near agreement on money matters and will try to wrap up all of their new contract within nine days.

Both sides agreed to a "news blackout" on the talks and pledged a "major effort" to clean up non-economic issues standing in the way of a new three-year pact for GM's 406,000 production workers.

★ ★ ★

GM said it offered a money package Sunday "which in its broad outlines conforms to the economic settlements reached at Ford Motor Co. and Chrysler Corp." It said the union was "studying" the proposal.

The wage settlements at Ford and Chrysler called for a per-hour increase averaging $1.01 in wages and benefits over a three-year period.

In a joint statement the company and the union said a settlement by Dec. 14 "will require concentration on non-economic contract matters that relate to both production and skilled trades workers."

The Dec. 14 date, previously set by the union as a deadline for settlement, but not a strike deadline, will be treated "as though it were a strike deadline," GM said.

★ ★ ★

One of the toughest non-economic matters still unresolved was expected to be subcontracting — the problem of how much work a plant can farm out to workers who don't belong to the UAW or aren't employed directly at the plant.

Youth Jailed In Drug Case

* * *

Courtroom Parade

A 19-year-old youth was sentenced to four months in jail in central magistrate's court Tuesday on a charge of possession of marijuana.

"The tragedy is, none of you feel there is anything wrong with possession of marijuana," Magistrate William Ostler told Christopher W. Perry of CFB Esquimalt.

Young people have a tendency to feel they can handle marijuana, the magistrate said.

STILL ILLEGAL

"People think that about alcohol, which isn't even prohibited," and yet many problems arise from the use of liquor, he said.

"Even if it isn't harmful, it is illegal," he said, in sentencing.

Perry was arrested the evening of Nov. 18 in a city motel, and three marijuana cigarettes were found behind a radio in the room. He admitted having bought four cigarettes in Toronto, and having smoked one earlier in the evening.

He pleaded guilty earlier.

□

A Saanich mother of seven was fined $75 for shoplifting, after she was found guilty by Magistrate Ostler.

Mrs. Myrtle I. Knadle of 1910 Munn was stopped by the manager and assistant manager of the Shop-Easy store at Colwood Plaza at 11:20 a.m. Oct. 21 as she left the store with groceries totalling $30.

The store manager said he had observed her after the assistant manager had reported she was putting groceries into bags in her shopping cart, instead of placing them loose in the cart.

WHEELED OUT

He saw her leave the cart near an exit door, then return in a few minutes and wheel it out the door.

When questioned about a receipt she showed a receipt for about $2 worth of groceries for, which she had actually paid for, court was told.

Magistrate Ostler said he felt sympathetic for mothers on low incomes, subjected to great pressures, but had little doubt her actions were "a clever and well contrived scheme to steal from the shop."

□

Frank J. Cirkelbach, 27, of 1120 May, was fined $300 for driving while under suspension, a charge on which he had been convicted earlier.

Cirkelbach was arrested Nov. 24 on Hillside, and claimed he was only driving because his friend was too drunk to drive.

"I think you invented the story, but because there is some doubt in this bizarre story," the magistrate ordered the fine, rather than imprisonment.

□

Fined in central traffic court for careless driving: William Gemmell of 3937 Dawe, $35; John Glover of 4407 Torquay, $40; Robert Riggs, of 1891 Haultain, $40.

Bi-Bi Report

The commission says in reporting on its four-year study that none of its recommendations would force anyone to learn a second language.

But it warns that if French-language rights are not guaranteed in English Canada Quebec might question its constitutionally bilingual character.

ONLY IN QUEBEC

Under the BNA Act, Canada's constitution, minority language rights are guaranteed only in Quebec.

The commission says the bilingual districts are the cornerstone of its recommendations. It adds that it borrowed the idea from Finland.

These districts would be created throughout Canada where the French or English minority formed 10 per cent of the local population. There would be none in Newfoundland or British Columbia at the present time because of this 10-per-cent qualification.

SCHOOLS, TOO

In these districts, federal, provincial and municipal services would gradually be made available in both languages. There would also be minority-language elementary and secondary schools.

Confines of the districts would be determined by negotiations between the federal and provincial governments.

If no agreement could be reached, each of the federal and provincial governments could declare delineated areas officially bilingual.

The commission report contained a map showing that there are 54 census divisions in Canada with an official-language minority of at least 10 per cent: one in Prince Edward Island, four in Nova Scotia, eight in New Brunswick, 24 in Quebec, 11 in Ontario, four in Manitoba, one in Saskatchewan and one in Alberta.

The commission says the census divisions would be taken only as indicators and that none would necessarily form a bilingual district.

"We consider the bilingual district the cornerstone of our proposed system," the commission says.

REALISTIC SYSTEM

"Without forcing the majority to adopt a system which would quickly become unbearable, the institution of bilingual districts can provide a just, flexible and realistic system which does not impose rigid rules and unjustified obligations on anyone."

The French-language minority would know it could obtain in, say, a given area of Ontario, the same services accorded to the English-language minority in Quebec.

"At the moment Quebec is the only province in which the official-language minority receives full recognition.

"No matter what the historical or economic justification for this situation may be, it appears more and more of an anomaly.

"What is less and less acceptable is not so much that Quebec, with its large English-speaking minority, is officially bilingual, but that, despite their sizable French communities, Ontario and New Brunswick are not.

MOTHER TONGUE

The 1961 census showed 697,402 Canadians in Quebec whose mother tongue was English; 425,302 Canadians in Ontario whose mother tongue was French; and 210,530 Canadians in New Brunswick whose mother tongue was French.

"If each of these provinces declared itself officially bilingual, 89 per cent of all Canadians belonging to official-language minorities would live in a province where their language was officially recognized."

An officially bilingual province would first legalize the use of French and English in its legislature debates. Laws and principal regulations of the legislature would be published in both languages. The same would apply to the legislature's records, minutes and journals.

Each bilingual province would grant its minority the right to deal with the government in the official-minority language and to receive replies from provincial offices in that language.

Each bilingual province would organize its educational system to serve the two language communities.

The commission, which has already spent $7,000,000, indicated that its work is far from finished.

It promised at least nine more reports on these subjects:

- The socio-economic status of Canadians of different ethnic origins.
- Education in its relationship with the official languages and different cultures.
- The federal capital.
- Parliament, the cabinet and Supreme Court of Canada.
- Voluntary associations.
- The other ethnic groups and their contributions to Canadian culture.
- The arts and letters.
- The mass media.
- General conclusions.

The commission said its first present report is unanimous though Commissioners Rev. Clement Cormier and J. B. Rudnyckyj signed subject to observations made in separate statements.

Father Cormier said the commission is too rigid in its definition of "official bilingualism." The commission's definition applies to provinces only when the sum of language rights corresponds to its proposed new section 133 in the constitution.

Rudnyckyj said he suppports some form of constitutional recognition of major languages other than English and French.

He proposes that languages other than English and French be recognized in the constitution as "regional languages" when spoken by at least 10 per cent of the population in an administrative district.

COMMISSIONERS

All 10 commissioners have varying ethnic backgrounds and are bilingual.

Of the co-chairmen, Laurendeau, 55, is from Montreal.

Dunton, 55, is from Ottawa. Father Cormier, 57, is from Moncton, Rudnyckyj, 57, from Winnipeg.

Quadra Returns After Shakedown

Mammoth Waves Pummeled Stricken Weathership

By MARK DICKINSON

A tale of a tough and dangerous trip unfolded Tuesday after the Canadian Coast Guard weathership Quadra steamed into port.

The $12,000,000 vessel had survived an ordeal that will never be forgotten by the 95 aboard and her skipper, Capt. Randy Dykes.

"In all my life I've never seen such a violent storm," the captain said.

Waves towering higher than 60 feet battered the ship's superstructure, ripped loose deck plating, bent steel gear and forced the Quadra to return home two days ahead of schedule.

Good Ship

"If we didn't have full power and such a good ship, we probably would neve have made it," Capt. Dykes said.

Quadra began to dodge disaster early last Friday.

First, one of her three turbo-generators broke down when a coupling on a turbine shaft seized up. But two remaining generators enabled her to keep full power.

And a few hours later, Friday's storm smashed through her patrol area at weather station Papa, 900 miles west of Victoria.

Walls of Water

The ship dipped into seas so far that walls of water crashed with full force against the superstructure just below the bridge.

Capt. Dykes said that when the 404-foot ship lifted on the crest of a wave, it would "vibrate like a turning fork."

Hurricane-force winds whipped up spindrift that made most parts of the ship invisible from the bridge.

The skipper said the ship's wave-recorder can measure waves up to 60 feet, and the "monsters" towered higher than that.

Higher Than 100

Winds gusted higher than the 100-mile-an-hour limit on the ship's scale.

The 52-year-old skipper has been at sea 38 years.

The battered superstructure began to leak, and salt water damaged electronic controls.

The 5,400-ton vessel was forced to steam 150 miles out of her patrol area, heading westerly into the storm because she couldn't turn around in the high seas.

Then another threat struck: She was using too much fuel in the effort to ride properly through the hurricane.

Hurry Back

And she had to get back to port in case another turbo-generator broke down and left the ship powerless and completely at the mercy of the storm.

"It was touch and go and we kept our fingers crossed," said chief engineer H. B. Brett, 53, who has been at sea since 1935.

She was originally slated to leave Station Papa Tuesday morning and arrive in port Thursday, but the heavy damage forced her to head homeward Sunday morning.

She arrived 8 a.m. Tuesday.

"That storm gave the ship a really good shakedown cruise," Mr. Brett said. "As a result, we have found a few weaknesses that will now be rectified.

"It was better to come home early rather than risk the old straw that breaks the camel's back."

But the sea kept up its harassment of the Quadra all the way to port.

Early Tuesday morning, winds gusting over 70 miles an hour struck her in Juan de Fuca Strait.

"You don't like bringing a ship into port in a wind like that," the skipper said.

Meanwhile, district marine agent Larry Sleght said the Quadra's engine room had been sealed off from everyone.

This morning a full investigation will be carried out by the manufacturer's representatives into the cause of the fault of the turbo-generators.

Cost of all damage to the ship has not been estimated.

Turbo - generator problems are not new to the Canadian Coast Guard.

One broke down in the Quadra's sister ship, CCGS Vancouver, last year and was replaced with one from the Quadra, then being built.

The one from the Vancouver was rebuilt and later installed in the Quadra.

As soon as Capt. Dykes reported to the Victoria office Friday that the problem had occurred once again, crews checked the Vancouver's generators.

A coupling on one of them was showing signs of excessive wear, Mr. Sleght said.

So the Vancouver went to the repair shop at Yarrows Ltd., and sailing was delayed from Friday to Sunday while crews rebuilt the coupling.

Village Still Dark

The community of Port Renfrew was still cold and dark early today, nearly 24 hours after heavy winds knocked out its power supply early Tuesday.

The wind was the same blast which hit Greater Victoria, spinning wind gauges up to 78 miles an hour. Power and telephone service were also disrupted here but the lines were repaired by nightfall.

The storm, with winds nine miles an hour greater than they were last Friday, hit at about 4:30 a.m.

Two schools, Royal Oak high and Royal Oak elementary, were closed because they couldn't be heated in time for classes Tuesday morning.

Candidates Speaking

The Cadboro Bay Ratepayers' Association and the Association of Women Electors are sponsoring a Saanich all-candidates meeting at 7:45 p.m. today in St. George's parish hall, off Maynard. The forum will follow the annual meeting of the ratepayers' group.

Four Recent Cases, Doctor Charges

Urgent Patients Dying

Wallace

At least four people have died because of Victoria's hospital bed shortage, a doctor charged Tuesday night.

"A recent survey of 20 cases awaiting urgent admission revealed that four had died while awaiting admission," said Dr. G. Scott Wallace, who did not name the hospital where the survey was made. He also did not name the patients or their doctors.

PREVENTION BYPASSED

"These few, sad facts spell out quite clearly the gravity of the bed shortage."

The dimension of the bed crisis is demonstrated by the fact that at Royal Jubilee and St. Joseph's hospitals urgent cases have to wait several weeks for a bed, he told a meeting in Oak Bay, where he is an election candidate.

"Such a situation nullifies any attempt to practice preventive medicine and to get at the medical problems before they become more serious to the lasting detriment of the patient," added Dr. Wallace.

Dr. A. C. Pickles, executive director of Royal Jubilee Hospital, had no comment on Dr. Wallace's remarks.

Dr. Embert Van Tilburg, executive director of St. Joseph's, said:

NO QUESTION

"Any doctor who states that his case is an emergency gets that patient admitted. We do not question it. It is up to the doctor to classify the patient as emergency, urgent or elective."

Meanwhile, it was learned Tuesday night that there are about 750 people on the urgent waiting lists at the two acute care hospitals.

In addition, 2,000 people are on the waiting lists as elective cases. At Royal Jubilee last week, some patients were being booked for September, 1968, for non-urgent surgery.

'VITALLY CONCERNED'

"The medical profession in Victoria has been vitally concerned for some time about the availability of acute care beds," said Dr. W. J. Bell, president of the Victoria Medical Society.

The doctors are not only concerned with the number of beds but also their utilization.

Dr. Wallace, one of 12 persons seeking council office, spoke to about 130 persons in the Oak Bay Municipal Hall at a meeting sponsored by the Association of Women Electors, Oak Bay Board of Trade and Oak Bay Ratepayers' Association.

In his campaign address, he added: "Close co-operation with other municipalities with the recently-formed regional hospital board will be of paramount importance."

TIME OFF?

He said in view of the Agnew Peckham report on hospital needs, "the work of council would be enhanced by having on council a local physician."

Only apparent dispute arose when a member of the audience asked civil servants running for council if "they have the blessing of their offices to take enough time off to devote the energies toward to time-consuming job on council?"

Newcomer Leonard Duncan and incumbents W. J. Wade and J. D. Watts said they had been granted time off from their offices for council duties and pointed out that most municipal obligations were required on weekends and during evenings.

Chateau Concept Desirable Says Backer

The concept of a retirement home for elderly people seemed too good a thing for Victoria to lose if there was a possibility of saving it, Logan Mayhew, 3515 Beach, said Tuesday in County Court.

He was giving evidence in the trial of Leslie Millin of Vancouver on three counts of fraud.

Millin had pleaded not guilty to obtaining by fraudulent means from Nick Shewchuk $5,100 and 160 acres of land in a transaction involving two shares of stock in BHP Investments.

SIMILAR COUNTS

In two similar charges, the prosecution also alleged that Millin obtained $5,000 for one share from Donald Fischer, and $2,500 for one half-share from Jennie Zailo.

Mr. Mayhew said he had put up most of the money involved in the Chateau Victoria project, on the basis that if some units could be sold there would be no problem with subsequent financing.

Millin, he said, had described himself as a Baptist minister and missionary executive.

BACK TAXES

Mr. Mayhew had put up $30,000, some of which had been used to pay back taxes on land purchased near Esquimalt Lagoon.

After the property was foreclosed, he had put up $10,000 and later an additional $5,000 on options to repurchase the land for $86,000, and hand it over to the company.

Donald Joseph Frank Fischer, 28, 95 Crease Avenue, said he had met Millin through a friend in April, 1965, and had been offered a share for $5,000.

DOUBLE PRICE

He asked for time to check and think it over, but was told the price would double when construction started, "any day now." Each share, he was told, would be worth $40,000 when construction was completed by that Christmas.

He had given Millin a post-dated cheque for $1,000 and then investigated.

He had found a mortgage against the property, and that no money had been deposited with Montreal Trust.

LAWYERS' HANDS

He asked Millin about this and Millin had said the money from the units was in the hands of the lawyers, and the matter would be straightened out shortly.

Mr. Fischer said he believed him, and later obtained $3,000 from his father toward the cost of the share.

The case continues at 10 a.m. today.

Victoria's fifth traffic fatality in 17 days occurred Tuesday, when 81-year-old Mrs. W. W. Patterson of Suite 3, 1333 Fort, died a little more than an hour after being struck by a car outside her home.

The death was Victoria's sixth this year. It came as police stepped up their campaign for more care by both pedestrians and drivers.

Mrs. Patterson was crossing Fort Street at Fernwood at 12:45 p.m. when she was struck by a car. She died in Royal Jubilee Hospital at 2:05 p.m. Police identified the car's driver as Kenneth Grant, 23, of 1840 Newton. They urged any witnesses to the accident to come forward.

Coroner Edmond Jorre de St. Jorre ordered an inquest in the traffic death for 7:30 p.m. Monday, but was unable to set a place as funeral arrangements have not yet been announced. Mrs. Patterson's only relative lives in Edinburgh.

Insp. Richard Berry said Tuesday, "We are doing everything we know to avert such tragedies."

He said officers on foot patrol are cracking down issuing tickets to pedestrians, especially during the peak traffic hours.

In addition, a patrol car with two officers is cruising the downtown area with a loud-hailer, trying to instil better walking habits in pedestrians, he said.

The first fatality in the cycle occurred Nov. 19, when Mrs. Martha Kovats, 33, of 1674 Warren Gardens was killed in a two-car collision, ending an eight-month fatality-free record.

On Nov. 21, pedestrian Alfred Kneen, 85, of 1345 Stanley, received fatal injuries when he was knocked down by a car on Pandora near Stanley.

The next day, Miss Winnifred Tucker, 82, of 340 Linden was struck and killed while crossing the 1100 block Fairfield.

On Nov. 28, Lenore Harkin, 6, of 3128 Glasgow was struck and killed while crossing Douglas south of Tolmie during the rush hour.

Carr Painting Brings $10,500

City artist Brian Travers-Smith bid $10,500 for an Emily Carr painting at an auction here and fought off stiff competition from outside dealers. Mr. Smith explained following his successful bid that the picture "was for a private citizen in the city who wishes to remain anonymous at this time." Bidding on the painting, titled Spring, opened at $5,000.

MOST ACTIVE

The second highest price of the evening went for a Lawren Harris work titled Upper Humber River. A dealer paid $5,000 for his work by a member of the Group of Seven.

Other Group of Seven works were a painting by J E. H. MacDonald which brought $1,900 and A. Y. Jackson which sold for $1,400. The majority of the sales were below $100.

The most active bidding came from half a dozen dealers and a private collector from Vancouver.

Auctioneer Wilf Lund sold the same Emily Carr painting in 1964 for $2,100. He said the total Tuesday night "was $50,000 for just under 200 paintings."

The sale had something for everyone and covered most of the varieties of artistic taste. At one point, Mr. Lund jumped back when one of his assistants struggled with a valuable painting by a member of the Group of Seven. He turned to the crowd and quipped, "He does that, and he knows I have a weak heart."

IN COMMAND

The dealers were in complete command when the major works were on offer, and save for the Emily Carr took away the best material.

Lund's Auction staff had been collecting material for the sale over the past six months, and have sent catalogues and received mailed bids from as far away as Montreal.

Apart from the deadly serious business of bidding on the top works, the crowded salesroom enjoyed plenty of fun with a wide variety of paintings and pastels.

THREE HOURS

It took almost three hours to dispose of an entire collection, with the longest bidding on the more inexpensive paintings. While it seems possible to get a painting for every small outlay, Mr. Lund advises his customers, "The days of the real bargains are over."

It is probable that the majority of his customers disagreed.

COOKE'S FORUM— 'It Seems Obscene to Sweat in It'

By JIM MURRAY

The trouble with Jack Kent Cooke is, nobody ever believes him.

Take the time he owned the Toronto Maple Leafs baseball team and Horace Stoneham wanted a relief pitcher for his Giants. Jack was horrified at the man he wanted. "Horace," pleaded Jack, who loved the Giants, "Don't take this guy. He's a drunk, a child-molester, and will spend more time in court than he will on the mound."

But Horace knew a fast shuffle when he heard one, and he began shoveling players at Cooke — among them two guys who later became all-star pitchers, another who became a leading home run hitter for two teams—so fast Jack couldn't resist. So Cooke shrugged and quit arguing. And the pitcher in question never finished an inning, never mind a game, for the Giants, and everybody said, "Boy, is that Cooke a smart one. Look at the way he slickered old Horace."

★ ★ ★

Then, Jack said he was going to buy the Lakers for $5,000,000 dollars, give or take a little loose change, and everyone said, "Hah! Where's he gonna get five million dollars? It's just a stunt to get his name in the paper."

And Jack Kent Cooke gave Bob Short 5 million dollars in cash for the team.

Then, he entered the bidding for an expansion hockey team, and everyone said, "He's over-extending himself. He'll go broke, and they'll never give him the team anyway." So, he got it.

And his landlords at the L.A. Sports Arena got huffy and had done everything they could to push Dan Reeves' rival bid, and they began to get sticky about dates and percentages, and Cooke said "Knock it off, or I'll go build my own arena."

And everybody laughed and laughed.

So he went out and bought the land. And everybody said, "A grandstand stunt. I hear he's hocked everything, and is eight million dollars in the hole already. They'll never even sink a steam shovel."

So, the other day I went out to Inglewood, and there, gleaming a brilliant white in the afternoon sun, was Jack Kent Cooke's arena, The Forum, a magnificent structure that looks for all the world like a monster white concrete crown set down in the verdant hills of Prairie Avenue.

★ ★ ★

If Jack Kent Cooke is going to the poor house, he's going in style.

The arena is, without question, gorgeous. It seems a shame to clutter it up with basketball and hockey. Like Dodger Stadium, it seems to deserve more Brahms, Liszt, Beethoven, ballet, great painting. It seems obscene to sweat in it.

Jack is now a full-fledged octopus of sport — with 25 per cent of the Washington Redskins, 60 per cent of the Seattle Totems, and 100 per cent of the Springfield Kings.

He named his hockey team "Kings," after a long and arduous search, saying he wanted something "uniquely American and Los Angeles" and resisting, along the line, the gratuitous suggestion he use "Queens." His choice of course, prompted a wag to suggest that Jack's nickname for the team was "uniquely American" because the team was named after George III.

Jack is especially proud of his forum location because it is free of "slum suffocation" which overtakes most American arenas as soon as they are built.

★ ★ ★

Some years ago, Walter O'Malley rejected a Flushing Meadows location for his then-Brooklyn Dodgers because it was hard by a cemetery and a body of water (the Atlantic Ocean), and O'Malley explained, "We're not likely to get any customers from either place."

Jack Kent Cooke is surrounded by a cemetery, too, but he's glad of it. "Dead people don't stick guns in the faces of your customers and say 'your money or your life,' and I know some arenas around this country where the dead bodies around them are still warm."

If he stays out of debtor's prison, Jack's facility will open on Dec. 30.

Maybe Jack is doing it all with credit cards, but I have to say this travelling salesman from Canada has done an aweful lot for a guy who started out with an armful of encyclopedias door-to-door, and wound up with a 16 million dollar edifice with nice quiet neighbors. Jack's only worry is that people will start believing him, and take all the fun out of it.

AT THE 19th

With Harry Young

The Daily Colonist's Christmas Tree tournament at Royal Colwood on Dec. 26, will have the distinction of being the last open event in Canada to be played under the present rules of golf.

The new rules come into effect January 1, and from that day on unorthodoxy will be banished so far as exotic methods of hitting the ball are concerned.

On Jan. 1, the straddle putters go into exile, and their owers will have to revert to the old-fashioned style from whose bondage many released themselves in the more tolerant years.

Incidentally, a Montreal golf monthly has charged that the blame of the putter ban lies at the door of the Royal and Ancient Golf Club of St. Andrews. The magazine claims that it was the purists from the medievel headquarters of golf who forced the other bodies to "knuckle under" and change the rules so far as unusual putting weapons are concerned.

This, of course, is far from the truth. The move primarily did not come from Britain, although all three parties to the rules revision — the USGA, the R and A. and the RCGA — agreed that the change was desirable.

The only parties at present unwilling to accept the new rules are the tournament pros of the U.S. They dislike continuous putting as well as the banning of the croquet-type putter, and presumably they will not conform in USPGA events next year.

So far as the Christmas Tree is concerned, unorthodox putters will be welcome to make their swan song. The entry form will appear in The Daily Colonist on Sunday, Dec 10. It should be filled out immediately and mailed with the $5 fee to the Victoria District Golf Committee.

Although snow interrupted the play in 1964 and 1965, interest in the Christmas Tree trophy is as strong as ever, and already a number of letters and telephone calls have been received from distant parts in which winterbound golfers from other parts of Canada are wondering how they can be included.

There is also likely to be usual contingent from Vancouver and Up-Island clubs.

Winter winds have played havoc with some noble trees that form part of our local golf courses.

Friday evening's blow smashed up the fine old pine that for 75 years has stood sentinel over the right hand approach to the 14th hole at Victoria Golf Club.

This over-ripe conifer which caught many a shot that was hooking its ways towards the green split down the middle in one of the 70 mile-an-hour blasts and last weekend it lay broken and bowed across the entrance to the green.

It will be many years before a suitable replacement can be grown to take its place, and we fear the hole will never be the same again — not in our lifetime anyway.

Gorge Vale also lost a venerable old fir beside its 5th fairway, Leo Derman tells me, but in this case the regret is merely aesthetic. Its departure does not alter the play of the hole, as does the loss of the old pine at Oak Bay.

Ed Cuppage who has the distinction of being the Royal Colwood member living closest to the club, has been honored as its new president.

He was elected to the post at last week's annual general meeting.

Ed, who is a past winner of the Empress Tournament, is so fond of the game and the Royal Colwood club that he built his home just across the lake from the clubhouse.

As vice-president, Cuppage will have one of Colwood's most distinguished golfers in Laurie Kerr, who for the past two years has been the club's green committee chairman. Laurie is many times a Colwood champion, holds the record in the city championship, is a former B.C. amateur champion and also a past winner of the B.C. Close. He has also played for B.C. in the Willingdon Cup.

Gordon Hutcheson, the new captain, replacing Derek Rhys Jones, is a low handicap player, and a Scot who learned the game in the land of cakes and heather.

Elected to the board of directors were Don Ross, Denny Hendra and Robert Peters, who joined holdovers Jack Parker and Jim Stewart.

★ ★ ★

Colwood is still going strong in the buttons field. Earl Davies and John Morgan, two members of Bill Court's pro-shop staff, resisted the challenge of George Bigelow and Vaughan Trapp of Victoria in Sunday's open buttons play at Gorge Vale.

The clincher was Morgan's birdie four at the 15th which put his team two up. They halved the remaining holes to win 2 and 1.

The junior buttons also remain at Colwood with Ron Howard and Ken Floyd, but they prevailed when their Uplands challengers failed to show.

Soon the only true spartans of the golf links will be the women

To prove that they are no longer the slow pokes of the game, the Canadian Ladies Golf Association has put a time limit on competitive golf rounds for next year — three-and-a-half hours for a single and four hours for a three-ball or four-ball.

In Britain, the LGU is setting a trial by ordeal for candidates for places in the British team to meet the U.S. in the Curtis Cup next summer.

To make sure that no talent will be overlooked and that the team chosen will be as tough as nails, the LGU has devised a trial by ordeal for 140 of the best British players.

Divided into geographical groups of seven or eight players, they will all have to meet one another during the winter months in match play, and the best 27 will be invited to a three-day trial next April.

As one British golf writer says "no fainthearts are going to survive the LGU's stony path to glory."

Victoria High trounced Mount View, 65-17, at Mount View and Oak Bay riddled Mt. Douglas, 74-27, at Oak Bay.

Barry Moen, returning from a soccer injury, led the Totems with 15 points but it was also his agility and quick thinking on defence which helped his team-mates to their rout of Mount View.

TOUGH DEFENCE

It was the strong man-to-man defence that held the Hornets to only five points in the second half while 15 points from Gordon Hoshal and 12 from Bill Clark put the game away for the Totems.

Randy France led the losers' with 12 points.

A deadly Dave Morgan - Don Burrows combination proved too much for Mt. Douglas, the two Oak Bay aces netting a total of 38 points.

Morgan led with 20 points, two more than Burrows. Brent Mullin added 14 more for the winners while Bob Rimmer scored nine for Mt. Douglas.

REVELSTOKE, B.C. (CP) — Lloyd Woolley's Calgary rink has won the second annual British Columbia Tournament of Curling Champions and the $1,000 first prize.

The Woolley quartet won the 16-rink, double-knockout tourney with a narrow 7-6 victory over Ed Gee's Vancouver foursome.

A make-up rink skipped by Hec Gervais of Edmonton won the B event with a victory over Roy Vinthers of Kamloops. Also on Gervais' quartet was former world champion skip Ron Northcott, Bernie Sparks and Fred Storey, all of Calgary.

Jonathon Wins Over Abdullah

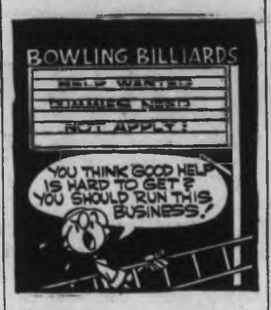

Don Leo Jonathon came out on top Tuesday night in the feature bout of the professional wrestling card at Memorial Arena when the referee disqualified Abdullah.

In other bouts, Rocky Johnson and Don McLarty and Woody Farmer and Jose Quintero grappled to draws and Roy McLarty won a decision over Jack Bence.

PHOENIX (AP) — Howie Menard scored in 53 seconds of a sudden death overtie to give Springfield Kings of the American League a 4-3 victory over Phoenix Roadrunners Tuesday night.

It was Springfield's second win in a five-game swing of the Western Hockey League.

The tough line of Menard, Doug Robinson and Gerry Foley accounted for the Kings' final three scores that brought them victory after Phoenix had jumped into a 2-0 first period lead on goals by Sandy Hucul and Del Topoll.

Jim Wilcox got the other Phoenix marker.

Robinson picked up the puck in front of his own net after Phoenix had misfired on a shot that goalie Jacques Caron caught between his knees, flipped to Foley to start the play that went to Menard, who was poised in front of the Phoenix net.

Colony Motor Inn, paced by Jim Cunningham, exploded for 71 points in the second half Tuesday night to whip Red Lion Inn, 108-66, in a Victoria senior men's basketball league at Oak Bay high school.

Coffee Macs, nee Independents, topped Labatts, 77-60, in the other half of the double bill to remain four points ahead of Colony Inn.

Cunningham, playing only part of the game, piled up 32 points for Colony and got lots of help from Bill Wilson who finished with 21, Dave Emery with 15 and Ed Steele with 14.

LUSK PACES LOSERS

Red Lions stayed in the contest until half time and trailed just 28-37 at that point but they were no match for the winners after that. Jack Lusk with 16 was top man for the losers.

Coffee Macs who started the season as Independents celebrated their adoption by sponsor Bob MacMillan with a solid performance against Labatts.

They romped into a 44-28 lead in the first half and won with plenty to spare although outscored 35-33 in the second half.

The rugged doubleheader produced a rash of fouls and five players were banished from the two games. Seventy-nine points were produced on free throws with Labatts making 24 of 34 and John Devlin of the brewers making nine of 11.

O'Keefes Assist Schools

Victoria O'Keefes, with the weekend off in the Pacific Coast Soccer League, will meet an all-star high school team in an exhibition match at Heywood Avenue on Saturday at 2 p.m.

Proceeds will go to the Greater Victoria High School Sports Council.

O'Keefes play their next league match at Macdonald Park on Sunday, Dec. 17, against Firefighters.

The match was rescheduled from Dec. 16 in order to make the park available for an international school rugby match between Glenalmond Trinity College of Scotland and the South Island high school Selects.

The Scottish XV opens its five-game tour of B.C. tomorrow with a game against University School on the University School grounds.

Wininger Partially Paralysed

OKLAHOMA CITY (AP)—A statement Tuesday from pro golfer Bo Wininger's personal physician said "from all indications Wininger will have a paralysis of the right side of his body" from a stroke suffered last Thursday.

The statement also was concurred in by members of the family of the former Oklahoma State University golf star.

Reseeding Would Close Royal Athletic Park

If Royal Athletic Park is reseeded in March, it will not be available for soccer until the fall of 1968, city council parks committee was told Tuesday.

City Manager Dennis Young said the field was sodden at the moment. The earth underlay on the field was satisfactory but the sod was not, and it would have to be replanted if the field was ever going to be permanent.

"It seems that we shall have to ask everyone to make a sacrifice so that we will be able to get a permanent field which will last for years," said Ald. Robert Baird.

Mr. Young said the field was unplayable now. One section, covered with gluey mud, hadn't dried out since the beginning of October, he said.

Engineers were making a series of percolation tests on the sport area at the present time, he added.

Appeal to Queen By Housewife Ref

LONDON (AP) — Queen Elizabeth is smack in the middle of a new battle of the sexes—should women be allowed to referee soccer matches in England?

Mr. Pat Dunn, a 34-year-old housewife, is the woman who may put the Queen on the spot.

Pat passed all her soccer referee's examinations and then applied for official recognition from the all-male referees' club.

DEFINITE NO

She got a definite no from her own county organization. She got yet another even more definite no from the English Football Association, the ruling body of soccer in England.

So now Pat has decided to take the whole business straight to the top—in other words to the Queen as woman to woman.

Pat's position as a referee, despite all her qualifications, was spelled out in clear language by FA official H. N. Bird.

WILL AMEND RULES

"Regulations will now be amended to state specifically that females may not be registered as referees," he said.

"Until now it has not been the practice to recognize lady referees, but it wasn't actually written into the regulations."

Last words from Pat, the woman referee who reckons she can control soccer as well as any man: "So I've been beaten on points by the FA.

"All I can do now is to write to the Queen—the only woman who seems to be tolerated by them. . . ."

Provincial Grant Helps Olympic Bid

VANCOUVER (CP) A $5,000 provincial government grant has been presented to the Garibaldi Olympic Development Association, President John Fraser told the group's annual meeting this week.

The funds, plus a matching Vancouver grant, will be used to prepare a bid to bring the 1976 Winter Olympics to Whistler Mountain, 70 miles north of Vancouver.

"It is the first time in the seven-year history of the association that the city and province has given us financial backing," Fraser said.

The Whistler site lost to Banff, Alta., in previous bids for the 1968 and 1972 Winter Olympics but the Alberta site was later rejected by the International Olympic Committee.

Mr. Fraser said his group is seeking endorsation from the Canadian Olympic Association and "we think that Banff may bid again."

"There is an excellent chance of Canada getting the Winter Olympics if we do our homework properly."

Canada has never held a Winter Olympiad.

with Alec Merriman

This reporter goes to Mexico next spring to fish for marlin and sailfish off Acapulco, and maybe take a side trip to Mazatlan to fish with Mike and Dolly Gorick, who operate a fishing resort in Mexico during the winter months and Pedder Bay Marina here in the summer months.

There was no more surprised and stunned person than me at the annual King Fisherman Contest prize presentation banquet at the Dominion Hotel Friday night.

Last thing on the program was the presentation by Canadian Pacific Air Lines special public relations representative Jim McKeachie of Mexico trip details to contest winners Kingston and Pat Smith.

And his last sentence went something like this: "This year we will send Alec Merriman along to cover the trip."

You, the readers of this column who have bought my new book—Outdoors With Alec Merriman—will send wife Taffy along with us. I plan to use my first royalty cheque to take her along. I couldn't think of a more proper use, because, after all, she has been a major participant on this outdoors beat.

Incidentally, sale of the book has been gratifying, with more than half of the first 5,000 printing sold in the first month. We ran into a little trouble at first when we didn't have enough copies bound to fill the demand the first week. There is no shortage now. They are available at most book stores, most stores that sell fishing tackle, Colwood Pharmacy, Town and Country Cunninghams, and some newsstands.

Friday brought excitement, but Saturday brought gloom.

Our plans for the weekend had been a clam-dig Saturday night, shrimping overnight and Sunday morning and a big clam and shrimp feed at our Gordon Beach cabins.

But stormy weather, ocean swells and the highest tides of the year put a stop to those plans.

We arrived at our Sooke cabin Saturday shortly after noon to find things in a shambles. Knee-deep water surrounded both cabins and we had to put on our waders to reach them. Big logs floating between the cabins and the road.

On the ocean side, huge logs and planks had washed up in front of the cabin. Our launching ramp had been pushed well up into the yard. A 50-foot-long log rested a foot from the cabin. But we were among the lucky owners. There was no damage to our cabin, although big boulders had washed up from the beach to rest on the sill of the door. Our plywood boat was holed by a log.

Next door, Bob Pethick's boat was smashed to splinters, the Hooles were worse off. Logs had smashed their front windows, water had swept through the cabin and two logs were hurled onto one of the beds.

Second cabin east, belonging to Len Smith, escaped with only three windows broken, but huge logs rested against his porch and only the fact his boat was swept ahead of them appeared to have saved his cabin from being smashed. His boat appeared undamaged.

The Tugwell Creek end of Gordon Beach Estates was hit much worse. Frank Frost, who has done a great deal of work fixing up his three or four cabins, suffered most with logs crashing right through a couple of his cabins. Wally Silberhorn and Hazel and Barney Baker were forced to evacuate their cabins. Ches Preston's was among several cabins which had lost its porch.

It wasn't Friday's storm that did the damage. That storm backed up the high tide.

Then, along came the huge ocean swells. These 15-foot high swells thundered in at the high tide. Huge logs and debris which had floated free in the high tides toppled end over end to wash up on the beach, some of them to crash the cabins.

But, we who have cabins along this beach, have come to expect and fear this kind of a storm every few years. The last big one, in 1953, swept some of the cabins almost on to the Sooke Road. That is why these cabins are not finished as plush summer homes. One never knows when a storm will wipe out your cabin.

These Gordon Beach cabins are a holiday paradise in the summer, especially in hot fishing years like we had this year. But they are also nice in the winter. You have to be there to realize just how thrilling it is to sit in the warmth of a west coast seashore cabin, sipping hot rums, and watching the huge swells thunder on shore. And after the storm there is always beachcombing.

Suspension Imposed On All Blacks' Star

CARDIFF, Wales (Reuters) — Colin Meads, New Zealand All Black's forward sent off in the Rugby Union international game against Scotland Saturday, has been suspended for the next two matches of the tour.

The giant forward will be available for the last match of the New Zealanders' British tour, against the Barbarians at Twickenham Dec. 16.

Race Driver Nears Own Record

MONTREAL (CP) — Herve Filion, who established a Canadian record for harness drivers in 1966 with 254 victories, is racing the calendar as well as opponents this week in an effort to better his previous mark.

Filion, a 27-year-old native of Angers, Que., currently has won a total of 243 races, most of them against top competition in the United States, this year.

The Blue Bonnets Raceway meet closes here Monday, Dec. 11, leaving Filion less than a week to pick up another dozen victories and break his own record.

Filion, who earned 50 cents from his father when he won his first race at nearby Rigaud 15 years ago, has gone on to rank among the top 10 money winners in North America for the last two seasons.

So far this season his horses have won close to $600,000.

West Dominates Stars

OTTAWA (CP)—George Reed, of Saskatchewan Roughriders, was the only unanimous choice Tuesday on the 1967 all-Canada professional football team named by the men who cover the sport.

Reed, the fullback who overshadowed every other ground-gainer in Saturday's Grey Cup football game, got everybody's vote on the all-star lineup issued by Ted Reynolds of Vancouver, new president of the Football Reporters of Canada.

SEVEN FROM SASK.

The selection is made well before the Grey Cup game, which Hamilton Tiger-Cats won 24-1 over Saskatchewan this year, but is not disclosed until after the game.

Western Conference players dominated both the offensive and defensive squads chosen by the FRC.

Saskatchewan placed seven men aboard and Calgary Stampeders had five; Ottawa Rough Riders won four spots and there were three representatives from the Grey Cup championship team. Montreal Alouettes and Edmonton Eskimos had two representatives each, Toronto Argonauts had one and both Winnipeg Blue Bombers and British Columbia Lions were shut out.

The West placed seven men on each squad, the East five.

The teams:

Ottawa Seeks Aid In Divorce Study

OTTAWA (CP) — The provinces, churches and private organizations will be asked by the federal government to help with research into the effects of the sweeping new divorce legislation now before the Commons.

Justice Minister Trudeau, introducing the second-reading stage of debate on the divorce bill in the House Tuesday night, said the government must study effects of the bill on marriage.

It would begin continuing consultation with the provinces and others concerned on results of the reform.

BROADENED

The bill would broaden present divorce law—which in the main accepts only adultery as a ground for divorce—to include marriage breakdown, bigamy, physical or mental cruelty, sodomy, bestiality, rape and homosexuality as grounds.

Trudeau said Canada's most up-to-date divorce laws date back to 1870, so it was not surprising that present laws were highly unsatisfactory and produced some evil results.

POOR CHOICE

The choice in many cases was between not getting a divorce and living under common law arrangements, or going through a hypocritcal performance of fabricating evidence to obtain one.

There had been mounting pressure from all areas to reform the law.

The resulting proposed legislation was the "product of a social pressure that has been building up over the years."

Trudeau told MP's they should not attempt to translate their personal morality into divorce legislation.

RECONCILIATION

The government had approached the problem with the belief that the first point to get into the legislation was that "the marriage is the important thing."

Following this line, reconciliation procedures were written into the bill.

The next major consideration was "weeding out the legal impediments to remarriage." The Canadian Bar Association had used an estimate of about 500,000 common-law marriages in Canada and "perhaps" there were that many.

NOT PERSONAL

Trudeau said the idea of divorce is still repugnant to many Canadians and he respects their views. But Parliament must not "mix the sacred and the profane." MPs were in the House to seek solutions to evils, not to turn their personal morals into legislation.

For this reason, he did not favor a vote free of party lines. It was a permissive law that "obliges no one to remarry." Prime Minister Pearson told the House earlier that the vote would not be a free one.

CHURCHES THANKED

The justice minister extended special thanks to the Christian churches for their support of divorce reform and said the churches were prepared, in some instances, to go farther with reform than the bill proposes.

The bill envisages divorces being handled by provincial supreme or superior courts rather than lower courts. These courts were the ones dealing primarily with basic human rights.

PROVINCIAL RULES

Provincial rules of evidence would be applied and differing rules of divorce and child support taken into consideration.

Trudeau said the bill did not accept the marriage breakdown concept as totally as some church groups had recommended because it would require setting up specialized courts with specially trained personnel.

Instead, the law spelled out certain conditions that would define marriage breakdown. He said this would avoid situations where courts refused to grant divorces on the argument that every marriage could be saved.

Judicial separation as provided for in Quebec's Civil Code was not dealt with in the bill. Trudeau said people in Quebec could still apply for a judicial separation if they preferred.

Robert McCleave (PC—Halifax) congratulated Mr. Trudeau for "not falling into the trap of adopting marriage breakdown as sole ground for divorce."

OUT OF REACH

People who advocate the marriage breakdown principle in the belief that both sides are always partially wrong "live in the strange twilight world of today's morality where there are no blacks or whites."

McCleave said he is disappointed that the bill has rejected the idea that divorce should be a matter for courts a the county level. Instead, it would place the jurisdiction with the higher-level courts whose circuit judges might only reach some smaller communities once or twice a year.

Bill Unlikely On Abortion

OTTAWA (CP) — Justice Minister Trudeau said Tuesday he doubts the best way to change Canada's abortion law is through a separate bill rather than part of an omnibus Criminal Code amendment.

He said the government's planned changes won't be extreme, will bring abortion law into line with society as it is, and will win the approval of all reasonable men.

Grit MP Stuck With Stamp Bill

OTTAWA (CP) — A Liberal MP was shouted down and denied leave to introduce a private Commons bill Tuesday that would have removed the Queen's picture from postage stamps.

Fernand Leblanc (L-Montreal Laurier) proposed "an act respecting Canadian stamps." He said it is time Canadians of both English and French descent "cut the umbilical cord of their mother country and become real and true Canadians," co-operating with other ethnic groups in Canada.

Leblanc

Leblanc said his aim is to replace the Queen's picture on stamps with a stylized maple leaf.

★ ★ ★

Deputy Speaker Herman Batten asked the House if Leblanc had leave to introduce his bill. There was a strong chorus of "No" from Conservative benches.

Leblanc and several other Liberals rose hesitantly, apparently seeking to force a formal roll-call vote on the issue. They got no support from the Liberal cabinet benches and sat down quickly when it became apparent that there would not be the required 10 MPs standing to force a formal division.

Denis Admits Phone Call

OTTAWA (CP) — Raymond Denis testified Tuesday he urged Montreal lawyer Pierre Lamontagne not to mention him to the RCMP in connection with an offer of money in the Lucien Rivard case because the very mention of his name would make him a security risk.

Denis, 35-year-old lawyer and former executive assistant to the federal immigration minister, was testifying for a second day at his trial for attempted obstruction of justice by offering Lamontagne a $20,000 bribe to agree to narcotics smuggler Rivard's release on bail.

PHONE CALLS

He said Lamontagne telephoned him July 22, 1964, about having received phone calls and had warned him he "was about to report the facts to the RCMP."

Denis told Lamontagne he didn't want his name mentioned because a person's name being mentioned in RCMP files made him a security risk.

Lamontagne was then lawyer for the United States government in legal proceedings in Montreal to extradite Rivard for trial in Texas. Rivard, now 52, is serving a 20-year prison term in Atlanta, Ga.

OFFER DENIED

Denis has repeatedly denied making any money offer to Lamontagne and has said that Lamontagne was the one to mention such an offer in the Rivard case by relating to him July 14, 1964, that a courthouse crier in Montreal had offered him $3,000 in the case.

He said Lamontagne later called him about four telephone calls asking Denis to tell people to stop calling him, and relating that one caller claimed to be Denis' friend.

Denis said Lamontagne told him "Gingras or Gignac" mentioned that bail was essential for Rivard.

MET BRIEFLY

Denis has said he met a Robert Gignac briefly June 22, 1964, when a political acquaintance, Guy Masson, a contractor, asked Denis to explain extradition procedure and find out about the facts of the Rivard case.

He said he had not tried to learn the facts of the case before his July 14, 1964, meeting with Lamontagne.

"Never, never did I make this offer, never," Denis testified. Asked about Mr. Lamontagne's testimony that Denis used the words "on t'offre vingt mille dollars," Denis replied:

"Never did I pronounce these worlds, neither to Mr. Lamontagne nor to anyone else."

Regions Retain Tongue

OTTAWA (CP)—Seven regions outside Quebec where people of French origin form significant elements in the population come in for special analysis in the first report of the royal commission on bilingualism and biculturalism.

Three of the regions are in Ontario, two in Nova Scotia and one each in New Brunswick and Manitoba. None was in B.C.

Together they account for 604,300 persons of French origin, 71 per cent of the French reported by the 1961 census to be resident outside of Quebec.

The royal commission found they have displayed a "remarkable vitality" in retaining the French language. Those living on the Ontario side of the Quebec border were up to 96 per cent French-speaking. But in the Windsor area, under the influence of the United States border area, retention of the French tongue was only 49 per cent.

OTTAWA (CP)—The royal commission on bilingualism and biculturalism said in a preliminary report nearly three years ago that Canada was passing through the greatest crisis in its history.

"This is still the situation," the commission says in a preface to its first main report issued Tuesday night, which deals with the official languages.

The commission says that it intends to examine aspects of the crisis and propose remedies —some of which are set forth in the first report.

MORE TO COME

Later reports will deal with the working world of Canada, public and private; education; the federal capital; Parliament, the cabinet and the Supreme Court of Canada; voluntary associations; minority ethnic groups; arts and letters; and the mass media.

The general conclusions of the commission will fill a final volume.

The commission began its work Nov. 7, 1963, with a preliminary public hearing in Ottawa and went on to hear 404 briefs at regional meetings across Canada.

DRAMATIC DATE

Its dramatic preliminary report was dated Feb. 1, 1965, and made public Feb. 25 that year. Public and private hearings ended in 1965 and research studies began to reach the commission.

It says a great deal of research was needed "because practically none of the questions raised by the commission's terms of reference have been investigated before."

It was seeking "a reliable and substantial body of source material" rather than spectacular results.

The commission adds that the terms of reference are so broad that it could have "legitimately investigated almost every aspect of Canadian society."

'Too Late'

Separatist MP Gilles Gregoire said Tuesday it will take four years for recommendations of bi and bi reports to become law and, by that time, Quebec will be independent. He said of report: "It's too late. This is a show of good faith, that's all."

City Clergy Laud Divorce Bill

Victoria's ministers Tuesday night praised the new federal divorce legislation. However, several pointed out that laws alone were no guarantee of happier families.

They were commenting on a bill, given first reading Monday in the Commons, that makes marriage breakdown a cause for divorce. Previously, the only legally acceptable reason for divorce was adultery.

"The United Church has always said this reform was needed," said Rev. Robert Morris of First United Church.

Under the old legislation, couples were "virtually forced into a conspiracy to provide the evidence for adultery, and this makes a mockery of the law," he added.

OTHER REASONS

Mr. Morris said his church had long recognized that there could be many reasons other than adultery for divorce.

Msgr. M. T. O'Connell of St. Andrew's Roman Catholic Cathedral, said: "The new legislation may be very welcome, but it alone will not guarantee happier families.

"You cannot legislate morality. The communities now could work toward providing facilities that will help prepare people for marriage."

"Wonderful," was the reaction of Victoria lawyer Mrs. Marney Stevenson.

READ IT

She urged anyone interested in the problems of marriage or divorce to read the report of the committee, available from the Queen's Printer, Ottawa, for $1.25.

"The bill that was presented to Parliament includes all the grounds recommended by the majority of the parliamentary committee," she said.

Mrs. Stevenson said she expected that adultery would still be the most-used grounds for divorce, largely because most of the others call for waiting periods of three to five years.

Also, she said, the requirements for proof of adultery had been established over many years, and until they had been similarly worked out for the new grounds, proving these would be more complicated.

EXTENSIVE ENOUGH

Mrs. Stevenson said she expected there would be many divorce actions started as soon as the new legislation became law, but added, "It won't be any simpler, and it won't cost any less."

"The concept of the marriage breakdown is an important extension in addition to marital faults as the basis of divorce. The grounds are extensive enough to cover all the cases of injustice caused by ties to a dead marriage.

QUITE SYMPATHETIC

"I hope that now the bill has had its first reading, there will not now be too much delay before final readings."

Rev. Dr. J. L. W. McLean, of St. Andrew's Presbyterian Church said he had been interested in the divorce problem for years.

"In my opinion, the law has needed revision for years. It now looks as if they're moving in such a way that we would have a law that could be enforced. It has been quite unsatisfactory. I have always felt it overlooked basic problems, such as the broken home. I'm quite sympathetic to this divorce reform," he said.

He added a note of caution: "We don't want to make it so easy that it will weaken marriage and the home, because these are the stabilizing forces of our life."

The Presbyterian Church has always permitted remarriage of divorced persons under certain circumstances, Dr. McLean said, if there has not been deliberate or wilful violation of the marriage vows previously taken.

One of the obstacles in the past, Dr. McLean added, had been the position of the Roman Catholic Church with respect to divorce, which had made it difficult for the Ottawa government to consider any revision of the divorce law.

"If that church today is prepared not to put obstacles in the way, the new law might very well be successful."

BLESSING OF LIFE

"Certainly, happiness is one of the blessings of our Christian way of life," he concluded, "and it's been my opinion that the church should assist persons who are sincerely seeking this happiness."

Canon Hilary Butler, canon lecturer at Christ Church Anglican Cathedral, said:

"I feel the judicial criterion is not necessarily always appropriate to determine whether a marriage has broken down. For example, one could imagine the case of homosexuality, which could be curable, but which in the present bill would presumably be an absolute ground for divorce."

Canon Butler added that Christians should support the bill.

THE DAILY BRITISH COLONIST

December 6, 1867

"Monitor," the well known political economist of the Telegraph and high priest of the Annexationists, fired off his old fashioned blunderbuss, ten days ago, approving the Chief Justice position. Immediately upon the appearance of the reply of the Governor, however, the blunderbuss is fired again — but this time in opposition to the petition!! It is needless, perhaps, to say that as the first shot did not assist the object the last shot will not damage it. John Stuart must carry heavier metal in his turret, and must not point both ways at once, if he wishes his shots to have effect.

$2,000,000 Cheque Presented to City

A cheque for $2,000,000 was handed to Mayor Hugh Stephen Tuesday by the manager of the trustee company in the estate of philanthropist Thomas S. McPherson.

And there is still $750,000 coming to Victoria by the terms of the bequest in which Mr. McPherson divided his fortune between the University of Victoria and the municipality.

The total estate, which has appreciated considerably in value since Mr. McPherson died five years ago, amounted to $4,913,720, according to Douglas Abbott, manager of Canada Trust.

RATE UPHELD

A suggestion that the rates charged by Canada Trust for management of the estate as trustee for the financier were too high was rejected by members of city council Tuesday.

They unanimously decided that the fee of 2¾ per cent on capital was proper, in view of the fact that Mr. Abbott produced a document, signed by Mr. McPherson, which named the rate and which pointed out, additionally, that it was written specifically so that there would be no difficulty between the city, as beneficiary, and the trustee company.

Dunbar Leads Lions Concert

The Victoria Lions Club's 21st annual Christmas carol concert will be held at 8 p.m. today in Metropolitan United Church. Baritone John Dunbar is scheduled to lead the singing and there will be individual selections by Greater Victoria high school choirs.

Bylaw Passed

Esquimalt Council has passed a bylaw to exempt Gorge Vale Golf Club from a portion of its taxes.

Effluent Society Rapped

Rat-infested ditches, the stench of sewage and drain water heaving up the earth like rice pudding were all mentioned by Saanich council candidates at a meeting in Royal Oak Women's Institute called by Elk Lake and Saanich Ratepayers' Association Tuesday night.

"Get the shovel out now, repair faulty septic tanks and let's clean up the effluent society in which we live," said Mrs. Leslie Belfit.

"The garbage dump has to be cleaned up. It's an infernal mess," said Patrick Frumento.

SLOW PROGRESS

More than 100 persons attended the meeting chaired by John Blinko, himself a candidate for school board in District 63.

In opening the meeting, Mr. Blinko complained of the "slow rate of progress in this area of Saanich," restrictive residential zoning regulations and minimal spending of public works money in the area.

NO SECESSION

"This particular area around the lakes has held the short end of the stick again," he said.

He added that no secession from Saanich was contemplated.

In all, two reeveship, 11 council and four school board candidates addressed the meeting for five minutes each. A question period followed.

What Saanich needs:

A FULL-TIME Reeve trained in municipal administration who believes in:

★ Sewage-free beaches and ditches ★ Better surface drainage
★ Protection of our natural environment ★ Sound financial planning such as a municipal fire insurance fund.
★ Complete revamping of garbage collection and disposal

CHECK THESE TIME SAVING TELEPHONE TIPS and make your Christmas happier

There is great joy in exchanging Christmas Greetings by telephone. So much so, in fact, that thousands and thousands of Canadians do so each year. As a result, telephone facilities become crowded with traffic and you may encounter delays in completing your calls, especially on Christmas Day.

You can avoid these delays. Just follow the telephone tips below:

FIRST Make a list now of those persons in distant places to whom you plan to place Christmas greetings calls this year. Jot down the area code and telephone number for each one. You can get these — without charge — through your operator, or by following instructions in your telephone directory for reaching out-of-province information directly.

Do this now so you won't have to fight heavy holiday traffic just to get your numbers. By being prepared, you'll save time with your Christmas calls, whether you dial them directly or assist the operator by giving her the number you want to reach.

SECOND Don't wait until Christmas Day itself, when circuits across Canada will be overloaded, to place all your calls. Spread them over the holiday season. Your family and friends will enjoy your calls just as much, and you'll be more certain of getting through without delay.

REMEMBER The low, night-time and holiday long-distance rates are in effect from 6 p.m. Saturday, Dec. 23, through to 4:30 a.m., Tuesday, Dec. 26.

PREPARE YOUR CHRISTMAS PHONE LIST NOW. SPREAD YOUR CALLS.

And have a Happy Christmas.

Historic Heart Case Takes Solid Food

* * *

CAPE TOWN (AP) — Hospital tests Tuesday showed the heart transplant to Louis Washkansky is functioning well, the South African surgeon who directed the historic operation reported.

The 55-year-old Cape Town businessman had his first solid food since the operation Sunday, a soft-boiled egg for breakfast. He told attendants he was hungry. For lunch he had soup.

Prof. Christian Barnard, 44, the surgeon who directed the operation, told reporters Washkansky is being kept in an oxygen tent, but only to keep him isolated. He said the oxygen is not needed.

GOING WELL

Dr. S. C. W. Bosman, heart surgeon at the Groote Schuur Hospital, said Washkansky's condition "is very satisfactory" and "all is going as well as any open heart operation can behave."

Medical experts say the critical period will begin about Sunday when there may be some indications whether Washkansky's body will reject the new heart. Barnard said drugs are being administered to suppress possible rejection.

HAD HEART DISEASE

The heart of Denise Ann Darvall, 25, an accounting machine operator killed in an automobile accident Saturday, was implanted to replace Washkansky's diseased organ in the first operation of its kind.

Barnard said "an easier case," such as a child, could have been chosen but Washkansky's ailment was critical. A child could reasonably be expected to live much longer with a bad heart while the life expectancy of Washkansky had to be measured in terms "of days, or at the most weeks," Barnard explained.

TRYING TO HELP

Barnard said he did not set out to make medical history but was only trying to help a critically ill patient.

He stressed that the operation was "completely new surgery with a whole lot of unanswered questions."

"Even if the patient was lost a lot had been achieved and learned."

Medical specialists are taking readings of Washkansky's pulse and blood pressure every 15 minutes. Every four hours sodium potassium and chloride content of his blood is tested. Periodic urine tests tell whether circulation is good.

ALSO DIABETIC

Besides heart trouble, Washkansky suffers from diabetes. Washkansky's chances of survival will probably be affected by his diabetes, said Dr. H. M. C. Botha, who was responsible for the matching of the tissues in the transplant operation.

Doctors at Cape Town's Karl Bremer Hospital said a kidney transplant from Miss Darvall to a 10-year-old Mulatto is functioning and they are satisfied with his condition.

Jonathan Van Wyk received the kidney transplant at the same time as the Washkansky operation.

Operation Aid

Storing Organ Next?

From LAT, UPI, CP

LOS ANGELES — Surgeons at Stanford and UCLA universities Tuesday said that they are working on separate methods of storing the human heart before transplanting it in the ultimate recipient.

Benefit of such a move would be the ability to type heart and body tissues of the donor and recipient before the operation is performed.

Dr. Norman Shumway, of Stanford, hopes to attach the heart to blood vessels in the groin of an intermediary host while Dr. Richard Cleveland, UCLA, is working on a method of storing it in a bottle.

'Grandstanding, Not Ethical'

NEW ORLEANS — Dr. Andre Cournand, 1954 Nobel prize winner in medicine and physiology, said at a convention here Tuesday that the South African operation was ethically questionable.

Dr. Norman Staub, San Francisco, called the transplant "grandstanding."

Cournand said all possible means for determining the patient's chance for survival should be employed before going ahead with such an operation, in which the patient dies if the transplant fails.

Rejection Key Factor

TORONTO — Chief of surgery at Toronto General Hospital, Dr. W. G. Bigelow, said heart patient Washkansky is fighting against great odds.

"No one can say how long this man can last but I wouldn't expect — on the basis of experiments with dogs — that it could be more than a year because of the rejection factor," Dr. Bigelow said.

Solution Years Away

Allergy Puzzle Clearing

DENVER, Colo. (AP) — A Japanese doctor working at a Denver hospital for children with asthma says he believes he is on the trail of an eventual cure for hay fever and other allergies.

Dr. Kimishige Ishizaka and his wife, Teruko, also a doctor, have spent five years in their quest at their laboratories at the Children's Asthma Research Institute and Hospital.

IT WILL COME

The day they succeed in unravelling their medical detective puzzle may be a long way off, but Dr. Ishizaka said he is confident it will come.

Most of the immune antibodies in a human being are a protein called gamma globulin. By 1965 four classes of these proteins had been designated. The Japanese couple succeeded in isolating a fifth protein, which they call gamma-E.

"I am quite sure that gamma-E is the cause of human allergies," Ishizaka, 41, said in an interview.

* * *

"Not many cells are involved in this protein. If we can stop the formation of gamma-E, theoretically we can stop allergies. That is what we have been working on for five years and we'll keep working on it in collaboration with scientists elsewhere."

As Ishizaka explained it, when a person with an allergy is attacked by such things as pollen or house dust, the gamma-E protein in his body rushes to the defence, releasing a histamine.

So much of the gamma-E histamine is released that the sufferer's tissues swell, his eyes water and smart and his breathing often becomes difficult.

Ishizaka conceded that antihistamine drugs are available for the hay fever victim. What he is seeking is a serum or some other substance that could be injected into the victim, and head off the gamma-E rescue effort.

Radioactivity

Testing Trailer Visiting

A new device for applying radioactivity to industry and research will be on public display here Thursday and Friday.

Called a Radactan Neutron Activation Source, it will be in a mobile trailer located between the University of Victoria's Elliott Building and the ring road both days.

The device, from Atomic Energy of Canada Ltd., contains a source of neutrons, elementary particles which induce radioactivity in samples placed in the machine.

SAMPLE ELEMENTS

The resulting radioactivity is analysed by instruments, also included in the display, which determine the elements in the samples and their concentrations.

The machine has wide application in industry, mainly for quality control in the manufacture of steel and pulp and paper. It can also be used in university research.

Mrs. Hugh Stephen right, and Mrs. Les Parkinson look over the main sitting room of the Empress Hotel's new viceregal suite. Bowls of roses, carnations and poinsettas were placed around the gold and white room.

His Honor Opens Viceregal Suite

By DOROTHY WROTNOWSKI

Great changes have been taking place down at the Empress Hotel for over a year now. Renovations and a complete new decor has been made on several floors.

But one of the greatest of changes comes in the new site of the viceregal suite.

And yesterday, there was a formal opening of this really magnificent suite.

His Honor the Lieutenant Governor officially opened the solid oak-panelled door yesterday afternoon.

Mrs. Pearkes was with His Honor.

His Worship Mayor Hugh Stephen and Mrs. Stephen, Mr. W. H. Armstrong, President of the Chamber of Commerce, and Cmdr. Garfield Dixon were also there for the opening and tea following.

Fred Joplin, CPR manager of special projects and members of the firm doing the alterations, Hopping, Kovach and Grennell, A. Tremain, project designer, Ed Foo, project engineer and R. Kovach, project designer, were obviously pleased with the effect the suite had on the guests.

Mr. Les Parkinson, manager of the Empress, was host for the affair and Mrs. Parkinson poured tea from the dining room table centred with a bowl of deep red roses and lighted white tapers in silver candelabra.

★ ★ ★

The former viceregal suite was situated in the north side of the hotel.

The new site is on the second floor, facing a wide sweep of mountains to the south and a commanding view of the harbor and the Sooke hills to the west.

The entrance foyer is in solid oak panelling and opens into the master sitting room, decorated in white, shades of gold and touches of avocado green.

★ ★ ★

The floor, as in all other rooms, is covered with wall-to-wall carpeting in honey gold shade. This lovely soft shade has been truly named honey color touched with gold.

All the furniture in the suite is of solid old oak. Many of the pieces were in the former suite but much also has been gained from the Palliser in Calgary (now modern) and the Royal Alex in Winnipeg.

Two very fine prints, about 1803, hang above the Dover grate fireplace in the small sitting room adjoining the master bedroom. And a beautiful large mirror in carved oak frame hangs over the washbasin in the bathroom to the south bedsitting room.

The master bedroom also has a white-and-gold decor. Walls are of white plaster molding and curtains in gold on white pattern. The bathroom to this room is also white and gold, walls papered in flocked gold and white vinyl paper, floor and vanity tops in white and gold marble.

The bathroom to the south bedroom also has marble floor and vanity. Walls are covered with what looks and feels like moire silk but is actually vinyl paper.

The bedroom here is also in gold, white and antique green.

One wall of south facing dining room is in oak panelling and the other three in a formal gold and white vinyl paper. Curtains are a deep forest green velvet, the same colored fabric covering the chairs.

A cloak and powder room off the main foyer and a small kitchenette complete the spacious suite, which was originally eight rooms.

★ ★ ★

Peeked into the Georgian Lounge which was being rushed to completion for the W. T. Straiths pre-Christmas party this evening.

Their son-in-law and daughter, Mr. and Mrs. Ron Stuart, are coming from Vancouver for the party, and Mr. and Mrs. Reg Laver will be here from Port Alberni. A group of friends will also be down from Courtenay, Dr. and Mrs. H. A. Mooney, Mr. and Mrs. C. Laver, Mr. and Mrs. Charles Sutton and Mr. and Mrs. Henry Bool.

The bazaar was opened by Mrs. D. Falconberg, Duncan, who is vice-president of UCW Victoria Presbyterial.

Co-conveners were Mrs. M. Sober and Mrs. I. Beasley.

The Church hall was decorated in a festive theme with a beautiful scene of three wise men on one entire wall, the artistic work of Mrs. Emily Crosby.

Those in charge of the various stalls were: knitting, Mrs. J. Catto; sewing, Mrs. E. Parsons; home produce and delicatessen, Mrs. E. W. MacQuarrie; candy, Mrs. J. F. deMacedo; Christmas cards and novelties, CGIT and Explorers.

Miss Olive Mouat was tea convener and Miss Sally Mickleborough was in charge of tea tickets at the door.

Ann Landers

Dear Ann Landers: I just read the letter from the woman who always compared her children. I have a problem that is worse. My mother keeps comparing me to herself.

When I brought home my last report card my mother said, "So you got a D in arithmetic! I never got a D in my life." Well, maybe she didn't, but they probaby worked with Roman numberals when she was in school.

Last week I had to have a pair of boots. They cost $16. My mother gave me a 30-minute lecture on how it was when she was my age. She said her mother fed a family of five for a week on less than $16. Talk like this can make a kid feel real crummy. It's not my fault times have changed. Please straighten the older generation out, will you, Ann? — OUT OF TOUCH

Dear Out: O.K. Stuff some cotton in your ears, kids, this message is for your parents:

Dear Fellow Antiques: The one phrase that kids simply don't want to hear is "When I was your age." In the first place they don't believe you ever were. In the second place they couldn't care less about how it was. Comparisons are not only boring, they are meaningless.

It's a different world today than when you and I were growing up. While our kids have it easier in some ways, they have it tougher in others. One thing is for certain. I'm glad I'm not in high school today. I don't think I could make it.

★ ★ ★

Dear Ann Landers: The gentleman I have been going with for several years says a man and woman do not need a legal ceremony in order to be man and wife in the eyes of God. He claims many people who go together treat one another better and are more faithful than a great many married folks. According to him the ceremony is a mockery and he doesn't want any part of it. Please express yourself. — SILVER THREADS AMONG THE GOLD

Dear Goldie: It is true that some people who go together treat one another better and are more faithful than a great many folks who are married, but this does not mean that marriage is a mockery.

In our culture marriage is a part of the social structure. It also has built-in legal safeguards which can prove mighty helpful, particularly when there are children. No home should be without it.

★ ★ ★

Dear Ann Landers: Thank you for your advice to the neighbor who wanted to know what to do about the seven-year-old girl who was being beaten repeatedly by her parents. Every time I read a story like that I cry my eyes out.

A person who has not experienced these episodes can't imagine what goes on in the minds and hearts of these unfortunate kids. Although I was only seven when I was removed from my parents' home I can still remember those beatings as if they were yesterday.

Please print my letter as another reminder to those who may be inclined to close their eyes to such situations simply because they don't want to become involved. Abused children need your help. They are powerless to help themselves. — FORMER VICTIM

Dear Former: Thanks for writing and now I'll repeat my advice. Call the police or the child welfare agency the moment the beatings begin. Parents have a hard time denying the charges in court if the authorities testify that they witnessed the brutality.

Golden Wedding

Mr. and Mrs. August Hiquebran of 520 William Street will celebrate their golden wedding anniversary on Friday, at an "open house" from 2 to 4 p.m. and 7 to 9 p.m., in the War Amputees' Hall, 1610 Oak Bay Avenue. Mr. Hiquebran was born in Wellington, B.C., and served overseas with the First Canadian Pioneers from 1915 to 1918. In 1917 he met his wife-to-be, the former Margaret Hammond of Old Kilpatrick, Scotland, and on Dec. 8, of that year they were married. Two years later they moved to Canada, residing at Wellington until Mr. Hiquebran's transfer to Victoria with the CPR 36 years ago. They are both ardent lawn bowlers, and are members of Victoria West Bowling Club. Mrs. Hiquebran is a Past Worthy Matron of Victoria Chapter No. 17 Order of Eastern Star, and her husband is a member of the CPR Pensioners' Association. They are both members of the Silver Threads. The couple has two daughters, Mrs. N. (Margaret) Lennax and Mrs. R. (Eva) Barr, of Victoria, eight grand children, and two great-grandchildren.—(Kinsman)

Youthful Beauty

From the early twenties, bedtime massage with a vitalizing night cream is ideal for softening traces of surface skin dryness and tiny lines. Apply Olay vitalizing night cream to cheeks, forehead, and throat and coax it into the skin with light, upward moulding strokes, then remove with a tissue. Such care will encourage complexion loveliness.

Chantilly Lace Coat Complements Gown

Leta Catherine Caddell wore a floor-length fitted gown of white peau de soie, complemented by a coat of Chantilly lace when she became the bride of Alfred William Best in St. Christopher's Anglican Church. The coat was fashioned with wrist-length sleeves and had scalloped edges trimming the front opening and hemline. Her scalloped veil misted to shoulder-length and she carried a bouquet of tangerine carnations and yellow roses.

Parents of the principals are Mr. and Mrs. Alex Caddell, 583 McKenzie Avenue and Mr. and Mrs. Alfred W. Best, 661 Jones Terrace. Canon Robert Willis officiated and Mr. Caddell gave his daughter in marriage.

Mrs. Lillian Goodwin sang "O Perfect Love" and the "Lord's Prayer" during the signing of the register.

Miss Aleda Caddell was maid of honor for her sister, Mrs. Robert Duncan, bridesmatron, and Miss Lorraine Wood, bridesmaid. They wore matching gowns of yellow peau de soie, topped with embroidered chiffon jackets, and carried bouquets of gold chrysanthemums.

★ ★ ★

Little Wendy Layfield was flower girl, wearing a dress of yellow peau de soie, trimmed with gold. She carried a basket of fall-toned chrysanthemums.

Lawrence Fox acted as best man. Rod Caddell, the bride's brother and Ken Holding ushered the guests.

At the reception following in the Uplands Golf Club, a four-tier wedding cake centred the head table, which was covered with a Belgian lace cloth. Frederic Goodwin proposed the toast to his niece.

For travelling on honeymoon to the United States the bride chose a two-piece camel hair suit with brown accessories, complemented by a corsage of yellow roses.

The newlyweds will make their home at 1269 Roy Road.

Esquimalt—Old or New?

Bryant

Status quo or change is emerging as a major issue in the Esquimalt municipal elections.

Incumbents are running on their records, and promising supporters more of the same policies. One newcomer also supports the present administration.

Challengers are asking for less secrecy about council affairs and a settlement of the continually sizzling issue of the present dual operation of Esquimalt's police-firemen.

There are three candidates, including the incumbent, for the reeveship.

Reeve Ray Bryant maintains he has done a good job and says the municipality is progressing steadily without major tax increases. His challengers say council has lacked leadership and constructive planning.

Six candidates, two of them incumbents, are battling for three seats on council.

Police-Fire a Sizzler

Reeve

George Argyle sees a definite need to re-establish harmony within the municipal hall, including council, staff and the police-firemen and a desire to restore public confidence in a council which has resorted to secret meetings to conduct public business.

"A well-led council with a long-range plan of development in the community can forget political affairs and get along with the job in hand."

He wants to see a land-use study, and co-ordination of volunteer agencies, with emphasis on fasilities for youth.

★ ★ ★

Incumbent Bryant is asking for a mandate to continue what he considers a successful two years in office.

"The real issue is whether or not people want to take advantage of my experience on inter-municipal committee and regional board.

"The underlying issue is the police-fire department and whether people want to re-elect the council that advocates a combined police-fire department as it is at present."

★ ★ ★

Coun. Arthur Mebs, seeking the reeveship, claims Esquimalt progress has been hampered by lack of leadership, which has led to a divided council.

"There is lack of communication between prosperous community-minded groups such as the chamber of commerce."

★ ★ ★

He wants to see the tax base broadened by encouraging development of the newly-established industrial park, study of low-cost housing for senior citizens, and a council-sponsored program for beautification of the business district and roads.

Council

Ernest Brown feels that lack of an efficient fire department is hampering business development in Esquimalt.

"We need progress in Esquimalt, an I think the combined police-fire department underlies this need.

★ ★ ★

"We also need less secrecy in council affairs. People have a right to know what goes on in council — to hear the discussions and the reasons for decisions, and which individual councillors were for or against certain measures."

Larry Cross: "I want to see an end to the continuous political arguments in council, and action on the real needs of the community at minimum cost to the tax-payers.

★ ★ ★

"Major problems will not be solved by councillors only concerned about votes."

Incumbent Roy Elphick would like to continue his work on the 18-month-old planning and zoning committee.

Esquimalt's representative on the Family and Children's court committee, he would like to see the opening of the new buildings, and continue his work on the committee.

★ ★ ★

Cross

Incumbent Gerald Horne is asking for support with a promise to continue present policies.

"I will give continued responsible representation in all matters pertaining to the growth and development of this municipality and the Greater Victoria area."

Mr. Horne has been chairman of the fire committee for the past year.

★ ★ ★

Dr. John Rogers is looking for a comprehensive zoning plan from the regional planning department.

"Pollution is a problem, and I want to see the Gorge cleaned up."

He also wants to see a small chronic-care hospital and a branch library in Esquimalt.

★ ★ ★

Arthur Young, says he approves of present council policies.

"We have efficient service from police, fire and all other municipal departments. I support orderly improvement of the whole municipality.

"We need less adverse and more constructive criticism from the public."

Smoky Fire

Saanich Home Damaged

Heavy smoke caused Saanich firemen to don oxygen masks Tuesday morning in fighting a blaze at 4008 Carey, caused by an overheated coal and wood furnace.

Firemen said the blaze, which caused $6,500 damage to the home of Mrs. Evelyn Speakman, started around a hot air vent between the bathroom and a hallway, then climbd to the one upstairs bedroom.

Danny Speakman, 10, the only member of the family at home, tried to extinguish the fire himself before running to a neighbor's house for help.

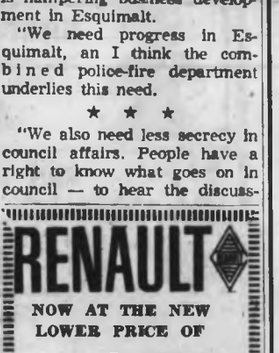

Mrs. Speakman and two older children had left the home shortly before the blaze.

UN Role Panel Topic

Dr. Hugh Keenleyside will be moderator for a Human Rights Day forum sponsored by the human rights committee of the United Nations Association of Victoria at 8 p.m. Sunday in the Union Centre auditorium.

Committee chairman Laurence Ryan said the panel, which will discuss the role Canada is playing in the UN, will feature four members: R. C. Haynes of Vancouver, secretary of the B.C. Federation of Labor! Phillip Paul, recently re-elected chief of the Tsartlip Indian band of Brentwood; Dr. R. J. Powers, University of Victoria political science faculty, and Anna Wootton Victoria lawyer.

IN VICTORIA VOTE— LARRY RYAN

LARRY RYAN WILL CONCENTRATE ON:

★ Low cost housing.
★ Air-water pollution control.
★ Job stability.
★ Light industry prospects.
★ Overall design in which role of professional planner will be recognized.

Alaska Considers Leasing B.C. Ferry

JUNEAU, Alaska (CP) —Alaska is willing to strike a bargain to lease ferries owned by the British Columbia government, the state's public works director said Tuesday.

George MacClanahan said in an interview the leased ferries could be used on a service planned between Puget Sound in Washington State and Ketchikan, Alaska, or along the northern state's coast.

"If B.C. has one available for lease we would sure be glad to talk to the people involved," he said.

Alaska plans to inaugurate service to Washington State Dec. 14 on a trial basis. The plan was announced after Premier Bennett of B.C. said the ferry Queen of Prince Rupert would not return to service between Kelsey Bay on Vancouver Island and Prince Rupert until early next year. That service linked with Alaska State ferry routes.

The provincially-owned Queen of Prince Rupert was taken out of service after it ran aground Aug. 11.

Mr. MacClanahan said his department had not considered B.C. might have vessels available for lease "but it would not do any harm to raise a trial balloon on this."

Two Airlines Bid For Victoria Run

Victoria Flying Services is seeking a licence to operate a scheduled floatplane service from the Inner Harbor to Vancouver harbor for $12 single fare and $16 return on the same day.

Bill Sylvester, head of the firm, told the air committee of the Canadian Transport Commission Tuesday a six to-eight-passenger aircraft would provide a four-times-daily service in both directions.

Ramp-to-ramp time, Mr. Sylvester told the hearing, would be approximately 45 minutes. The service is also planned to make stops to pick up passengers, by prior arrangement, at several Gulf Islands locations.

CHARTER RUNS

Victoria Flying Services now operates charter runs between Victoria and the mainland. Mr. Sylvester told the committee that if the application for scheduled service was granted to a competitor, it would mean an end to the locally-based charter operation.

AirWest Airlines Ltd. in a joint application with Nanaimo Airlines Ltd. is asking for permission to operate a triangle service linking Nanaimo and Vancouver, which it already serves, and Victoria Inner Harbor.

President Norman Gold said the service at fares between $10 and $15 would support a turbo-engine floatplane providing at least two and perhaps three flights a day.

SHIPYARD FLOATS

The service, which at the outset would use a six-to-eight-passenger floatplane, would operate between McKay-Cormack shipyard floats and Vancouver harbor.

Mr. Gold told the committee he felt two air services on the Victoria-Vancouver route would ge uneconomic for both.

AirWest is also applying for a licence to operate a flag-stop service between the mainland and the Duncan-Chemainus-Crofton-Ladysmith-Gulf Islands region.

Victoria Flying Services has the support of Victoria Chamber of Commerce and Mayor Hugh Stephen.

B.C. Airlines also applied Tuesday afternoon for a licence to add a Victoria stop to its present Vancouver-Tofino scheduled service. President William Gillespie told the committee a nine-passenger aircraft purchased last year for $227,000 would provide the all-weather service.

Mr. Gillespie said the addition of Victoria would make the present "marginal" service which links Vancouver with Bella Coola and Tofino into a profitable one.

Sailors Steaming for Home

It's going to be a busy scene Friday morning at HMC Dockyard.

Nearly 1,000 sailors will arrive home after a three-month training cruise in Australian and California waters.

★ ★ ★

The crews are from HMCS St. Croix, Yukon, Saskatchewan and Qu'Appelle, scheduled to enter harbor at 10:45 a.m. The dockyard will be open to families at 10 a.m.

★ ★ ★

Families should "double up" on cars to avoid traffic congestion and parking problems, the navy suggested.

It is expected Rear-Admiral John A. Charles, commander of Pacific Maritime Command, will take the salute as the squadron enters harbor.

★ ★ ★

The Yukon and St. Croix put to sea early in September and sailed to exercise grounds off Australia and New Zealand. Last week they were joined by the Qu'Appelle and Saskatchewan, and the four took part in a three-day exercise with United States warships near San Diego.

Mariners Form Consulting Body

A group of B.C. master mariners aiming to provide a central consulting body available to government and others wishing expert nautical advice has reached a membership of 20.

The Company of Master Mariners of Canada, headquartered in Vancouver, received letters patent in September to form a company for the advancement of Canada's marine industry.

"We now have 20 members that form a foundation council," Cmdr. Gerald Baugh said Tuesday from Vancouver.

FIRST DINNER

An inaugural dinner was held in Vancouver two weeks ago and the first formal general meeting will be held early next year, he said.

Foundation members from Victoria are Capt. E. P. de Cunha, Capt. Gerald Lancaster and Capt. J. C. Young. The rest are of Vancouver.

The group is entirely non-political and non-profit organization.

"It is a representative body of senior merchant service officers devoted to the advancement of the marine industry," said Cmdr. Baugh, chief organizer and first president.

The company, he said, will provide advice to royal commissions and commercial, scientific, educational or technical inquiries.

Road Knocks Tabled By Oak Bay

Oak Bay council Monday tabled for further study two letters opposing a plan to extend Cadboro Bay Road south to link up with Hampshire Road.

The letters were from E. A. Lovett, president of Monarch Holdings Ltd., who spoke of traffic and cost problems, and a group of store owners in an Estevan Avenue shopping area, who said their centre would be isolated. The link is part of a Capital Region Planning Board proposal in the Oak Bay Plan 1967.

Bird in Nest Today At UVic

University of Victoria will be presented today with sculpture called The Bird—a work about six feet tall and weighing more than a ton.

The presentation will take place in the office of university president Dr. Malcolm Taylor at 2:30 p.m.

Worth about $1,500, it will be a gift from Rothmans of Pall Mall Canada Ltd., a tobacco company. It is one of three pieces of sculpture purchased by Rothmans and given to B.C.'s universities.

"100% Colombian coffee should always be vacuum packed to keep it 100% fresh," says coffeegrower Juan Valdez.*

Juan wants his coffee to come to you as fresh as the day it was ground from the beans. Because only then can you appreciate the full flavour of his 100% Colombian Coffee.

Juan and coffeegrowers like him spend their lives growing coffee beans that deliver a richer, fuller taste.

Five thousand feet up in the Colombian Andes, the volcanic soil has had 300,000 million years to become rich in minerals. And the tall Guamas trees there spread a tent of shade so the beans can ripen slowly.

And since the harvest goes on all the year long, only the fully ripened beans are chosen, every one of them picked by hand.

These are the reasons why 100% Colombian Coffee tastes so good. And why Boban vacuum packs it to keep it that way.

But, he added, "I don't go along with them. I have no thought in mind that he was the organizer." After Depoe said the riot surprised him and he tried to help police, Foster dismissed charges against four people and delayed action until today on Depoe and 14 others.

Vatican Blasts Sexy Movies

VATICAN CITY (Reuters) — The Vatican newspaper says that sexy films, magazines and fashions are the cause of many sex crimes.

L'Osservatore Romano comments in an editorial on the case of a Turin youth who stabbed his financee to death Sunday and then tried to kill himself in the toilet of a movie theatre while a horror movie was showing walking skeletons and snakes biting scantily-clad women.

★ ★ ★

In newspaper crime reports, "one cannot fail to notice the recurrent sex motive—bands of thugs who attack girls, rapes, and murders 'for honor' which mar society," the paper says.

"To what degree are entertainment, publications and fashions . . . at the root of these criminal deviations?" it asks.

"Certainly the erotic and sexualistic element in our social atmosphere is not without effect—it helps to produce over-excited people, psychics and maniacally sick, contaminating a whole generation," it adds.

Garden Notes

Charm on the Rocks

By M. V. CHESNUT

During my early business career, as a trouble-shooting branch manager, I was transferred from one city to another on an average of every three years. Consequently I have lived — and gardened — in almost all the major centres of Canada and in several of the smaller cities too. And in all these places, I never saw so many and such good rock gardens as we have right here in Victoria.

I suppose this is because we have so much rock and so many homesites on steep, sloping ground. Most of these are beautifully maintained, but I see quite a few in which the owner bit off more than he could chew, not realizing how much labor is entailed in the proper maintenance of a rock garden. I could point to quite a few old, semi-neglected alpine gardens and banks, excellently put together, with beautiful stone and structure, but gone wild in its plantings, weedy and overgrown.

★ ★ ★

Such a rock garden can be brought back to its original charm and attractiveness; moreover, with a bit of intelligent planning, the labor of maintenance can be cut down very considerably.

In such planning, there are several objectives to hold in mind. One — we should select plants which smother and keep down weeds without themselves becoming too invasive. Three — we must harden our hearts and be quite ruthless in discarding weedy, worn-out or unsuitable plants.

First job is to rip out all the old White Root and Snow-in-Summer. Keep a few of the more vivid aubrietias, scrapping those with wishy-washy colors, and retain a patch or two of the yellow alyssum. Retain any really good alpine pinks, thrift, mossy saxifrage, but only the best of the campanulas. Root out the grape hyacinths — they have probably spread into every pocket — and naturalize them elsewhere, preferably on the flat.

★ ★ ★

In planting up our all-season but labor-saving rock garden, a good place to make a start would be with the hardy dwarf rhododendrons. Given a pocket filled with a mixture of leaf-mould, peat and lime-free loam, Blue Tit will go to town with its lovely harebell-like blossoms. The pink Bo-Peep and the pale yellow Hanceanum will bloom even earlier and are hardy and reliable.

To go with these, I suggest a dwarf broom or two. Cytissus kewensis makes a waterfall of pale yellow, blooming at the same time as Blue Tit. Cytissus beanii is a good butter-yellow and Smith's Bicolor is showy in scarlet and cream.

As the rhodos and brooms pass out of the picture, some dwarf evergreen azaleas can take over the job of supplying color. Some good ones for the rock garden are the crimson Hinodegiri, the white Palestrina, the purple Amoena, the pink Hinomayo, and Orange Beauty.

★ ★ ★

To follow in after the azaleas, the sun roses and rock roses — Helianthemums and Cistus — will keep the rock garden gay and vivid with color through June and July. With them can be planted the alpine campanulas and pinks.

August is a difficult month for most rock gardens but color can be maintained with the invaluable Hypericums or St. John's Wort, with golden yellow blossoms. These contrast well with the lovely deep blue of Gentian Septemfida, blooming at the same time. A bush or two of Caryopteris clandonensis will continue the blue theme through the fall months, and for winter we have the surefire winter heaths, Erica carnea, King George, Springwood White, Springwood Pink, Ruby Glow and Vivellii.

The Hot Water Line to the White House

Jessie Plays It Safe

By JERRY HULSE

JOHNSON CITY, Tex. — Everybody knows there is a hot line between the White House and the Kremlin. It's there in case one side accidentally shoots off a missile and wants to apologize to the other before they get wiped out.

Nobody, though, knew until now that another hot line exists. This one connects the LBJ boyhood home in Johnson City with the White House.

★ ★ ★

I discovered the line accidentally during a routine visit to the LBJ place. No one would ever guess where the phone is hidden.

I had no intentions of speaking with the White House when I knocked on the LBJ door. But Jessie Hunter insisted. Jessie is the caretaker of the LBJ growing-up home. She is the one who gave away the secret about these two dwellings being connected by hot line.

★ ★ ★

The four-room frame house where President Johnson ran around in rompers is set back about a block from town. Jessie — she's the ex-postmistress from Round Mountain — answered my knock.

"Afternoon," she said. "Like to see the house?"

I said yes and walked into the living room. Off to one side was Lyndon Johnson's chair. I studied letters he'd exchanged with various relatives. And there was his first picture. He was six years old. He looked like a boy with big dreams, even then. His high school graduation picture hung on one wall.

★ ★ ★

I began taking notes and Jessie took my arm.

"Why're you takin' the notes?" she wanted to know.

I told her I was writing a story.

Jessie threw up her arms. "We got to clear this with the White House!" she said.

"I don't think I can wait around that long," I said.

"Won't take no time," Jessie said. "Come with me, boy."

★ ★ ★

Jessie led the way into the kitchen. She closed the door, then paused before the hot water heater closet. She reached inside, pulled out a phone and removed the receiver. Quicker'n you can say corn pone a voice crackled over the other end: "White House."

A hot water line to the White House!

Appropriately, there was a picture of the White House on the phone where the number usually is.

★ ★ ★

Well, anyway, Jessie couldn't get hold of the president. She tried Lady Bird. Lady Bird was busy, too. Finally she got through to Liz Carpenter, Lady Bird's personal secretary.

"Hello, Liz. Jessie. Jessie Hunter. Down in Johnson City. Got a stranger here wants to write 'bout Lyndon's house. Figured we'd better clear it with the White House."

Jessie and Liz exchanged a few pleasantries. I was impressed with the security of the place. Here I'd come to write a simple travel story and it was being cleared with the White House.

Finally Jessie turned to me. "She wants to speak to you," she said.

★ ★ ★

Liz Carpenter was pleasant enough. She gave me a rather lengthy lecture on the tourist potentials of Texas. I couldn't help wondering how much it was costing the taxpayer to find this out.

But then, what the devil, maybe the hot line really is necessary. What if some nosy tourist came along and asked a question Jessie couldn't answer.

★ ★ ★

Like, "Whatever happened to the two-holer used to be out back?"

Jessie could slip off to the kitchen, reach into the hot water closet and say to LBJ or Lady Bird, "Tourist here wants to know whatever happened to the two-holer used to be out back?"

She'd have the answer in seconds..

Anyway, Liz Carpenter finished her lecture over the hot water line to me and I said goodbye to Jessie and went off to stroll through Johnson City. This takes about five minutes. I mean, if you want to see everything.

★ ★ ★

Minnie Cox sat behind a desk at the chamber of commerce office. On the wall behind Minnie was a picture of LBJ. It was for sale. So was the bird house sitting on a shelf. The sign on it said, "The Lady Bird House."

Tourists are always getting LBJ's boyhood home confused, though, with the LBJ birthplace, another little frame cottage down the road. It's on the banks of the Pedernales, next door to the LBJ ranch. There's a flagpole out front and a chain across the driveway with a sign that says, "No Trespassing."

★ ★ ★

I went up to look through the window. About this time a car came speeding down the road, its horn blowing.

Out stepped a chap who looked like the sheriff. He wore a Texas-type ranger uniform and a badge that said "Secret Service."

He asked for my driver's licence. I asked why.

"For trespassing," he said.

I said I had permission. I started to explain how I'd spoken to Liz Carpenter on the hot line in the hot water closet, but I could see it was no use.

★ ★ ★

I know the phone is there. Jessie knows it's there. So does LBJ and Lady Bird. But this bird with the badge just kept looking at me like I was looney.

Finally I said to hell with it. I gave him my driver's licence and he took my name. Now I expect to be hearing from the FBI.

I only hope they'll know about the hot water line.

Mia Too Old For Sinatra!

By SHEILAH GRAHAM

NEW YORK (NANA) —Frank Sinatra obviously found 22-year-old Mia Farrow too old for him. Current flame, Tiffany Bolling, is 19. She was the hat chick in Tony Rome. Frankie has also been chatting with wife number two, Ava Gardner, and wife number one, Nancy Sinatra Sr. And who has Mia been chatting with? I'm not privy to her phone conversations, but I'll take bets that Laurence Harvey has been on the hot line. He's her dandy in aspic and also her father confessor.

★ ★ ★

Tony Quinn has been dashing off nude paintings between The Magus takes and signing them, Manuela Oaxaca, his mother's maiden name. That's fine, but who were the nudes?

★ ★ ★

His Grace the Duke of Marlborough isn't a bit like the Duke of Bedford. Marlborough made Blenheim Palace available to Marcello Mastroianni for some scenes in Diamonds for Breakfast, but he remained in hiding during the filming. You know that Bedford would have been all over the cameras.

★ ★ ★

Paramount's musical version of Roman Holiday will be made in Rome with Franco Zeffirelli directing and Dino de Laurentiis producing. A big hunt is in progress to find a girl for the part that made Audrey Hepburn a great big star.

★ ★ ★

Terence Stamp has given up girls for books — one book to be specific, The Story of a Dream, which he is writing. It's four books in one, says Terry, with the first about an East End boy (which he was), very sensitive and clever (which he is), but who is somewhat homosexual and can't make it with the girls. He says it is not autobiographical.

★ ★ ★

Joe Levine is beaming. He has just licked the script, metaphorically speaking, of the Saul Bellows book, The Adventures of Ougie March. . . . I must add the name of Paul Newman to the boys who will be Oscar-nominated for the best performances of 1967, this time for that mocking smile in Cool Hand Luke. And what a performance it was.

★ ★ ★

Elizabeth Taylor and Richard Burton have added two monkeys to their menagerie. They met and learned to love them while filming The Comedians in West Africa . . . Talking of Africa, the reissue of The African Queen, with Hepburn and Bogart, is doing as well in it's current re-lease, as Gone With the Wind.

It's a Puzzlement

SYDNEY HARRIS

I was sitting next to a college boy at a little gathering, and we were listening to a liberal and a conservative arguing about the "proper" role of the government in large labor disputes.

At one point, the college boy turned to me and whispered, "The trouble with both of them is that they believe there are simple answers to complicated questions." I nodded in agreement: it was just what I had been thinking.

★ ★ ★

One of the baffling peculiarities of the human mind is its tendency to imagine that social or political or economic matters can be more simply disposed of by a few airy platitudes than personal or family matters. And quite the contrary happens to be true.

When we are dealing with a troubled child of our own, or a marriage that seems to be coming unhinged, if we have any sense at all, we quickly realize that the problem is complex, delicate, and does not admit of any easy answers on the basis of some abstract philosophy.

And we recognize that generalizations are dangerous, that conditions alter cases, that there is no simple right or wrong, that a subtle interplay of many different forces is at work.

Yet, when we leave the realm of the personal for the realm of the public, we immediately change our attitude — we sweep whatever is complex, delicate and subtle off the board, and respond with a set of dogmatic clichés and slogans that are often grossly irrelevant to the specific condition we are trying to deal with.

★ ★ ★

It should be possible to see that large public questions are even more complicated than personal ones; that many more forces are at work, more imponderables must be considered, more diverse demands satisfied, more long-range consequences envisioned. It is easier for a family to stop quarreling, for instance, than for two nations to conclude a disarmament pact that has genuine validity for both.

A man who has a firm opinion about the attitude of the law toward "delinquency" will change his tune when his own boy is facing a charge. He will then see that there are "exceptions," that the law can be unjust, that the word "delinquency" can cover a whole spectrum of juvenile activities, from mischievous to malicious.

★ ★ ★

And he is perfectly right — the more closely we become involved with a "public" question, the more personal it becomes, the less rigid and dogmatic we learn to be about it. There aren't even simple answers to simple questions; and to the hardest question of all — how we can best live on this earth — no one has yet found an answer we can really live up to.

TV TALK

By BRUCE LOWTHER

U.S. Congressmen have taken two steps which could have earthquake effects on North American broadcasting in the 1970s.

The House commerce committee has given the U.S. Federal Communications Commission permission to authorize a start of a nationwide pay-TV system about a year from now. The FCC strongly supports the decision, which ended a 15-year fight, and hopes for a test system in 1969 with a U.S.-wide followup early in the 1970s.

Maybe even more important, the House investigations subcommittee has started a probe of possibly monopolistic practices by U.S. TV networks. The main targets are network ownership of series and how much say affiliated stations have on program content.

"Take one of these after the Lucy Show, one before Carol Burnett, one before Johnny Carson . . ."

BUREAU OF USELESS INFORMATION: Tuesday's titillating answer — James Cagney played entertainer-deluxe George M. Cohan in the movie Yankee Doodle Dandy. The Cohan family was father Walter Huston, mother Rosemary de Camp and daughter Jeanne Cagney. And Mary is definitely a grand old name, too.

Today's question— Short subjects were big at the flicks, once. Give the titles of the shorts bearing the names of John Fitzpatrick, Pete Smith, Grantland Rice and Robert Ripley. And name the newspaper feature of Ripley rival John Hix. Answer Thursday.

Wednesday's Highlights

11:25 a.m.—Pick of the Week reruns a good Vancouver film, Where Have All the Children Gone?—2.

3:00 p.m.—Attention Haligonians: Take 30 has a feature on the 50th anniversary of your explosion—2, 6.

C-6:30—Jerry Lewis, with mimic Frank Gorshin—6.

C-9:30—Festival: a concert with soprano Reri Grist, pianist Anton Kuerti, oboeist Harold Gomberggi and the Toronto Symphony Orchestra—2, 6.

C-10:30—Festival adds The Painted Door, a drama about adultery and a Prairie storm—2, 6.

Wind, Snow Shake Islanders

Snow swept the Malahat Tuesday night, many Island roads were impassable, hydro and telephone crews worked double-time to keep utilities running.

At Tofino, power was out for 14 hours, as west winds of 70 miles an hour lashed the west coast. The power was returned Tuesday night.

In Nanaimo, high winds knocked down trees, scattered branches, and stripped the roof-coating from the home of Lloyd Bertram, 199 Garner Crescent, allowing the home to be soaked.

On the Malahat late Tuesday, police were demanding cars have chains or snow tires.

Tofino schools were closed because of heating problems. Cowichan Valley loggers were unable to work because of heavy snow.

Trees Hit Homes

Hydro and telephone crews worked long hours Tuesday restoring electricity and telephone service in Duncan and most surrounding districts, following Tuesday morning's storm.

Reported to be one of the worst storms in the area for many years, winds were estimated up to 60 miles an hour.

The storm seemed to reach its peak around 5 a.m. when the power was disconnected in many areas including Duncan, Chemainus, Lake Cowichan, Cobble Hill, Mill Bay and Shawnigan Lake.

According to police, hardest hit areas were Old Koksilah Road, Cowichan Bay cutoff, Miller Road, Fairbridge and Lake Cowichan Road to Mesachie Lake.

As the winds increased, power and telephone lines were brought down by falling trees and limbs.

- Tuesday night in Parksville five hydro crews were just beginning to finish the repairs that kept them going through the day.
- Seacrest and Wall Beach were last major areas to get power back.
- In Nanaimo windows were blown in, and a tree crashed over the homes of L. B. Thomas, 2067 Forest Drive, and Larry Giovando, 711 Northumberland.
- In Duncan, the power was off for over four hours in some areas, and at some localities including Gibbins Road, hydro crews were still working in the late afternoon.

Several residents reported windows were sucked out of their frames as the winds created a vacuum.

In many areas, including Fairbridge, farmers had difficulty milking their cows, Tuesday morning. The local radio station could not transmit for four hours.

- In Ladysmith damage was minor, but two boats were sunk, including a cabin cruiser. Police are still investigating the incidents.
- In Chemainus, power was off in different areas for one to four hours.
- In the Shawnigan Lake, Mill Bay and Cobble Hill areas, most power was restored by 10:00 a.m., but some telephones were still reported out in the afternoon.
- The Lake Cowichan area was without power for about 4½ hours, but no serious damage was reported.

Ownership on Welfare

Low-Income Group Hails Housing Plan

Victoria's Low-Income group Tuesday night hailed a report that British Columbia may launch a pilot program enabling some people on welfare rolls to purchase their own homes.

"It can't happen soon enough," said president Mrs. Donna Langstaffe. "Good housing is one of our most important and least satisfied needs."

Welfare Minister Campbell said his department is negotiating with Central Mortgage and Housing and "one or two selected" assistant recipients.

BUILD EQUITY

He said it was felt that level-headed people who might be on welfare rolls for years, such as disabled people or widows with children, should be able to build up equity in the houses they live in.

The study involves means of devising a formula under which selected people could use their rental allowances and the $500 provincial home acquisition grant to obtain a special mortgage.

As things now stand, a person on welfare who was in the process of buying a house before applying for social assistance could continue with the mortgage provided they could keep up the payments out of their social assistance money.

Anyone already on welfare would find it impossible to buy a house as regulations stipulate that welfare payments will not be made to people with a cash asset of more than $250 for a single person or $500 for a family.

Rites Today For Son Of MLA

Funeral services will be held in McCalls chapel at 3:15 p.m. today for Gerald Wayne Tisdalle, 22, son of John Tisdalle, the Saanich MLA.

He died Tuesday morning in Woodlands School at New Westminster.

Gerald was born in Victoria. He is survived by his father and mother; two brothers, Rev. Vernon Tisdalle at Vedder Canal and Leonard Tisdalle, at home at 8040 Arthur Drive.

Sooke Petition Urges Vote

Th

City, Candidates Looking for Votes

About 20,000 "Get Out and Vote" folders went out in the mail from City Hall in the past week, and a campaign is in progress in the newspapers and on TV and radio to get Victorians to the polls Saturday.

And, for the first time, there will be multiple polling stations in Victoria. In addition to the Victoria Ballroom on Government Street, where voting has been held for years, there will be stations at James Bay school, Goodwill Enterprises at 220 Bay Street, Sir James Douglas school and Oaklands school.

★ ★ ★

There are about 21,000 eligible voters in the city. Percentage at the polls in 1966 was 37. City Hall officials were hoping to get 50 per cent or more out on Saturday.

★ ★ ★

Wilson

Thomas

Mayor Hugh Stephen received an acclamation this year, but there will be eight candidates for four seats on city council. Candidates have been making their platforms known in advertisements and at a number of candidates' meetings in the city.

★ ★ ★

Robert Baird, incumbent, is an investment dealer who believes in a convention centre for Victoria but that it should be built not as a municipal project but by private capital, and paid for by the hotel people and the tourist industry.

"I believe, too, that we should have a bridge to James Bay; that we should pool our purchasing requirements under the regional board and that we should have a bylaw to stop squealing-tire motorists and raw muffler noises. Let's have a fresh look at our public nuisance laws."

★ ★ ★

Frederick Bevis, retired, calls for an area-wide sewage-disposal system, scientifically designed to prevent further pollution of our land or coastal waters.

"I would press for the use of federal funds to provide decent, low-cost housing. This money has been available for some years, but has not been widely used. The shortage of hospital beds calls for early and drastic action."

★ ★ ★

Geoffrye Edgelow, publisher and incumbent, takes "progress with economy" as his slogan. The veteran of 14 years on city council feels that his experience is a stabilizing force on the civic body.

"I am delighted to see the renewed interest in local government as indicated by the plethora of candidates in almost all fields. With my experience, I could hardly help but be aware of all facets of the city's business, and I'm sure that I can continue to be of use."

★ ★ ★

Laurence Ryan, secretary of the Victoria Labor Council, believes that if people are critical of municipal administrations they should be prepared to "put up or shut up." Accordingly, he is a candidate.

"I intend, if elected, to look at the affairs of the city in the broadest light. I am interested in what is good for the community as a whole. I am particularly interested in widening the regional approach, particularly in the areas of health, welfare, recreation, community planning, zoning and sewerage."

★ ★ ★

Clyde Savage asks for "another kick at the cat." A retired druggist, he points out that he was on council formerly and wants to return to finish some of the projects started in his time.

"People ask, 'What is my platform?' I maintain it is sheer insanity to promise the electorate things which cannot possibly be done Every decision arising can only be reached after all the facts are weighed. However, I do believe that with conditions as they are, great restraint should be used in municipal spending."

★ ★ ★

Ian H. Stewart, incumbent and a barrister and solicitor, feels planning is all-important and must be linked to capital investment if the city is to make the best use of its resources.

"We have often talked of the downtown core and the need for preserving it. In order to do this, we must provide leadership in planning and secure confidence within the development sector of the city. I place such a redevelopment high on the city council priority list."

★ ★ ★

William D. A. Thmoas feels there is no conflict of interest between his post as a Colonist writer and aspiration for public office.

"Victoria needs a convention centre, but it should be built privately, so that the city's tax base is broadened. If a centre is built with public funds, it will only add to the tax burden. I believe that we must also face our housing crisis realistically. The present city program of urban renewal and slum clearance is not progressing quickly enough."

★ ★ ★

Incumbent Lily Wilson, retired, feels she has achieved a dream with the imminent opening of a new Family and Children's Court in Victoria.

"For four years, the court has been housed in most inadequate quarters — first in a basement and then in the old detention home. And the staff has been working under intolerable conditions. I am most happy that the new court is about ready."

Council Hopefuls Club Speakers

Alderman's Dream Comes True

The roof is on the new family and children's court building, furniture has been ordered, and Ald. Lily Wilson told members of the Kiwanis Club Tuesday that this was for her the achievement of a dream.

Last of eight council hopefuls to speak at the annual all-candidates luncheon, Mrs. Wilson said the formal opening of the new $275,000 court would probably be held in January. It was unique in that it was only the second time that the four principal peninsular municipalities had got together to erect a building.

SURVEY WORRY

Ald. Robert Baird, who is seeking to retain his seat on city council said he was against a convention centre for Victoria unless it was paid for privately.

He said he was much concerned at the shortage of hospital beds in the district, and did not feel happy about the massive survey which was in progress to assess the hospital needs of the area.

"Why is it that we always have to turn to surveys?" the alderman asked.

OFTEN CRITICAL

Victorial Labor Council secretary Larry Ryan said that he and other labor people had often found occasion to be critical of the city administration, and he believed that in such a case there was an obligation to "put up or shut up."

There were many challenging municipal issues, Mr. Ryan said, among them growing urbanization and making sure that the work of the planner was fully utilized in the building of a city. Orderly, co-ordinated growth and steady progress were targets to aim for.

YOUNG PEOPLE

William Thomas said involvement was all-important, and he felt that young people should get into city politics and make what contribution they could.

He felt there was no conflict of interest between his work as a writer and reporter and seeking public office. It would simply be a matter of refraining from comment in civic matters.

Desperately needed though it was, a convention centre should not be built from the public purse, the candidate said. But however it was financed, "Let's get on with it."

Guidelines for the future growth of the city were a necessity, in the opinion of Ald. Ian Stewart.

"And also, we must develop a formula to attract private capital. That, in fact, is one of the purposes of the waterfront urban renewal study."

Investors and planners must be brought together, the alderman said, and in the molding of these two influences lay the future prosperity of the city.

BIG BUSINES

Ald. Geoffrey Edgelow, a 14-year veteran of city council, said that Victoria was now a $15,000,000-a-year business, and growing bigger all the time.

An indication of its size was the fact that tax revenues up to Nov. 30 amounted to $8,696,798 — 99 per cent of the levy and an increase over 1966.

The mayor and council were working as a well-knit team for the good of the city, Ald. Edgelow added.

BETTER GOVERNMENT

Regional government, "amalgamation in disguise," could not help but make for better local government, said former alderman Clyde Savage, who seeks to return to council.

One of the things he hoped to get his teeth into this year was the problem of youth and what could be done in this field, said Mr. Savage.

If anything was to be done, however, the flow of money to City Hall must be increased. This could be done by broadening the tax base and protecting secondary industry.

Fred J. Bevis said he was for good, clean, bright, modern cities and homes within the reach of people. Good schools, modern and well-equipped hospitals and opportunities for senior citizens were all targets to be aimed at.

Pollution of water and air should be eliminated and transportation and traffic control improved in downtown areas.

Inspection Sought At Castle

The city engineer will seek permission from the Greater Victoria school board maintenance superintendent to send an inspector to look over Craigdarroch Castle.

Mayor Hugh Stephen told the city public works committee Tuesday there's a strong difference of opinion about the maintenance of the castle. James Nesbitt, president of the castle society, says it is not being kept up, while the school board, which occupies it, says the opposite.

Ald Robert Baird said there were complaints about faulty roof tiles, inadequate drains and deteriorating stonework.

The building, which is being used as a library and teachers' aids storage space, reverts to the city when the school board vacates.

Haircuts Up

OTTAWA (CP) — The Ottawa and District Barbers Union says men's haircuts now will cost $1.75, up 25 cents from $1.50. Children under 12 will pay $1.25, up from $1.

Major distiller bows to British Columbia taste...

continues producing Double Distilled whisky despite trend to national brands

At a time when whisky producers across Canada are moving to national brands, the B.C. Distillery Company is focussing attention on Double Distilled – a whisky sold almost exclusively in British Columbia. Why? In brief, because Double Distilled wouldn't go away. Small wonder, when you consider its background.

63 years of quality

Since 1904, Double Distilled whisky has been produced in British Columbia for British Columbians. From the beginning its distinctive flavor gained acceptance throughout the province, and over the years its reputation for quality and value stood unsurpassed. It came to be regarded, quite naturally, as British Columbia's own whisky. Yet, ironically, this mark of distinction placed Double Distilled in jeopardy. For as the company began producing other whiskies for national distribution, Double Distilled came to be regarded as a "minor" brand . . . a local oddity. Finally the day arrived when overall operating efficiency demanded the end of Double Distilled.

A logical decision

Logic demanded replacement of the company's only local brand by a nationally-known whisky. Double Distilled, while still produced to meet existing demand, would be ignored. Gradually it would fade away. And indeed, the grand old brand slowly waned. Sales diminished and the end seemed near. Then a remarkable thing happened. Double Distilled stood firm, as British Columbians refused to forget it. Confounded, the company could only relent.

Great days ahead

Who cares that Double Distilled is unheard of in Ontario? That Quebecers know it not? Whisky taste is highly personal . . . and a taste developed over 63 years is something to cherish. Here in British Columbia we know and enjoy the unsurpassed quality and value of the whisky that couldn't be ignored:

Pedros Both Too Late

RIO DE JANEIRO (UPI) — Pedro the Rich and Pedro the Poor, rival pretenders to what is left of the throne of Brazil, got around to demanding it too late.

They should have filed their suit 48 years ago, a federal judge ruled Monday in throwing out their claims to the royal palace. He said the statute of limitations had run out.

The two Prince Pedros, first cousins who speak to each other only through lawyers, were expected to appeal. They claim the statute of limitations does not apply because of various legal acts and changes in law over the past eight decades.

Wedding Gift

However, for the present, at least, the decision means the governor of Guanabara state will not have to move out of the 71-room rococco white palace in the presidential district.

Neighbors call the palace the "wedding cake palace" because of its ornate decorations—and because Emperor Pedro II gave it as a wedding present to his daughter and heir to the throne, Princess Isabel.

It's Personal

The royal family claimed the palace was not crown property but personal property, and not subject to seizure when the empire was overthrown in 1889 and a republic set up.

Prince Pedro de Orleans e Braganca, called Pedro the Rich, and Prince Pedro Henrique de Orleans e Braganca, called Pedro the Poor, teamed with six other descendants of Princess Istbel to sue the government. They said the republic had taken the palace illegally and later sold it to the state government.

Successful Suit

Earlier, the royal family had successfully sued and regained less important real estate once held by their imperial ancestors.

Rio de Janeiro became the seat of an empire when Napoleon overran Portugal. The Brazilian Orleans e Braganca family is a branch of the former royal family of Portugal.

Today the palace is a white elephant as far as living quarters are concerned. Gov. Francisco Negrao de Lima uses it only for offices. But 30 acres of prime residential real estate go with it.

Small Potatoes

Pedro the Rich can afford to lose the lawsuit. He still lives in grand style and entertains visitors royally. He's rich.

But for Pedro the Poor—who farms potatoes and is poor—the court decision meant a serious setback. He went back to his potato farm at nearby Vassouras.

BI & BI REPORT

Co-Chairmen Laurendeau, Dunton —CP

'Living in French must be made possible in every part of Canada where there are enough French-speaking people'

New Charter, Full Partnership

★ ★ ★

Bilingual Areas 'Cornerstone'

OTTAWA (CP)—The royal commission on bilingualism and biculturalism recommends what it calls a new charter, including constitutional changes, to guarantee minority language and education rights to both French and English-speaking Canadians throughout the country.

In tabling the report Tuesday in the Commons, Prime Minister Pearson repeated that "the government fully endorses the principle of linguistic and cultural equality that forms the core of this report."

Pearson said the cabinet has already considered the report and that he is suggesting that it be added to the agenda for the federal-provincial constitutional conference here early next year. (See also Page 14).

Davidson Dunton, co-chairman of the commission, told a press conference the commission has no firm reason to believe that any province outside Quebec will adopt any of its recommendations.

Andre Laurendeau, the commission's other co-chairman, said he has serious doubts that the report will convert Quebec separatists into federalists.

Dunton emphasized that the aim of the report is not to make all Canadians bilingual—or even any more than now are bilingual.

The aim was to make language and education opportunities available to French or English minorities.

Six of the commission's recommendations deal primarily with matters under provincial jurisdiction. Five involve both the federal and provincial administrations and three lie within Ottawa's jurisdiction.

Both Dunton and Laurendeau said the national crisis they referred to in their 1965 priliminary report still exists.

"It is very much still here—the same one." Mr. Dunton added.

The commission report says:

"The impossibility of living a full life in French outside Quebec and even in certain parts of Quebec is certainly one cause of the present crisis in Canada.

"Living in French must be made possible in every part of Canada where there are enough French-speaking people."

To achieve this end, the commission recommends:

- New Brunswick and Oantario recognize English and French as official languages as soon as possible.
- Any other province recognize English and French as official langueges whenever its official-language minority reaches or exceeds 10 per cent of the population.
- Provinces other than Quebec, New Brunswick and Ontario accept use of both languages in legislature debates and provide appropriate servinces in French for French-speaking minorities.
- Establishment of bilingual district anywhere in Canada that the official-language minority is 10 per cent or more of the population.
- Recognition of the rights of Canadian parents to have their children educated in French or English, implementation depending on the concentration of the minority population.
- Declaration that English and French are the official languages of the Parliament of Canada and federal courts, government and administration.
- Provincial governments amend their municipal legislation to remove all obstacles to the use of both French and English in local government.
- Enactment of a federal official language act and appointment of a commissioner of official languages—a "linguistic ombudsman"—to ensure respect for the status of both languages.
- Enactment of a similar act by the legislatures of officially bilingual provinces and appointment of provincial commissioners.
- A completely bilingual federal capital area at Ottawa—bilingual in public service and administration, courts, local government and education.

The commission also recommends a new section in the British North America Act to guarantee minority edueation rights and a rewritten section 133 to guarantee minority language rights outside Quebec.

B.C. GROUP SEEKING GRADE 1 IN FRENCH

COQUITLAM (CP) — The French-Canadian Federation of British Columbia has announced it will ask for French to be used as a language of instruction in public school primary grades in this Vancouver suburb.

Federation secretary-general Romeo Paquette said the proposal would be made at a Dec. 12 meeting between the federation and school trustees of district 43.

★ ★ ★

The federation is taking the initiative because of a recent comment by Premier Bennett, said Mr. Paquette.

"Mr. Bennett said French language instruction in the public school system could be considered where there was a concentration of French-speaking people in the community and if the district school board made such a request," he said.

★ ★ ★

"We hope we can convince District 43 school board to make such a request."

Mr. Paquette estimated that there were 3,000 French-speaking people within the school district, most living in the suburb of Maillardville.

★ ★ ★

He said the federation would like to see French language classes begin at Grade 1 and gradually work up through the higher grades of Coquitlam's school system. They should, he said, be optional.

"This would mean that by the time a student graduates from Grade 12, he could become fluent in both French and English.

★ ★ ★

Bonner Studies First

British Columbia government circles made no immediate comment Tuesday on the contents of the Bi and Bi report.

Premier Bennett was not available, and Attorney-General Robert Bonner said the report was a long time in the making and declined to give "an off the cuff summary of its contents." He said he would study it carefully.

Unity Holds Key

★ ★ ★

OTTAWA (CP)—Prime Minister Pearson told the Commons Tuesday solutions to the giant problems underscored by the royal commission on bilingualism and biculturalism must be based on unity and partnership.

"They must, they will, be found so Canada can live and grow to provide a good life for all its people."

Opposition Leader Robert Stanfield said the health and future of Confederation is involved in the issue and Parliament, the government and all political parties must be prepared to provide leadership.

The Progressive Conservative party had no desire to derive any partisan advantage from any matters dealt with in the report.

FULLY AWARE

"Our party will study this with full awareness of the gravity of the matters being discussed."

Stanfield said he hoped the full report of the commission would be made available as soon as possible. Some of the recommendations came under jurisdiction of the provinces, but "the whole area of federal-provincial relations relates to problems of concern to the country as a whole."

He recommended the first step would be for the prime minister to consult with the working committee of premiers.

PROBLEM ESCALATES

Stanfield said the problems had "been escalated" in recent months.

He questioned to what degree the Estates General of French-Canada represented the people and said it was fortunate the Confederation of Tomorrow conference took place in Toronto at the same time as the Estates General met in Montreal.

"It would be depressing for Canadians to have only the picture created by the Estates General."

Stanfield said he was not inclined to melodrama or to oversimplification, but "the future of the country is in our hands."

"We will be put to the test. I hope we will not be found wanting."

SOLUTIONS NEEDED

NDP Leader Tommy Douglas said those who find the recommendations of the report radical should realize that radical solutions are needed for the country's problems.

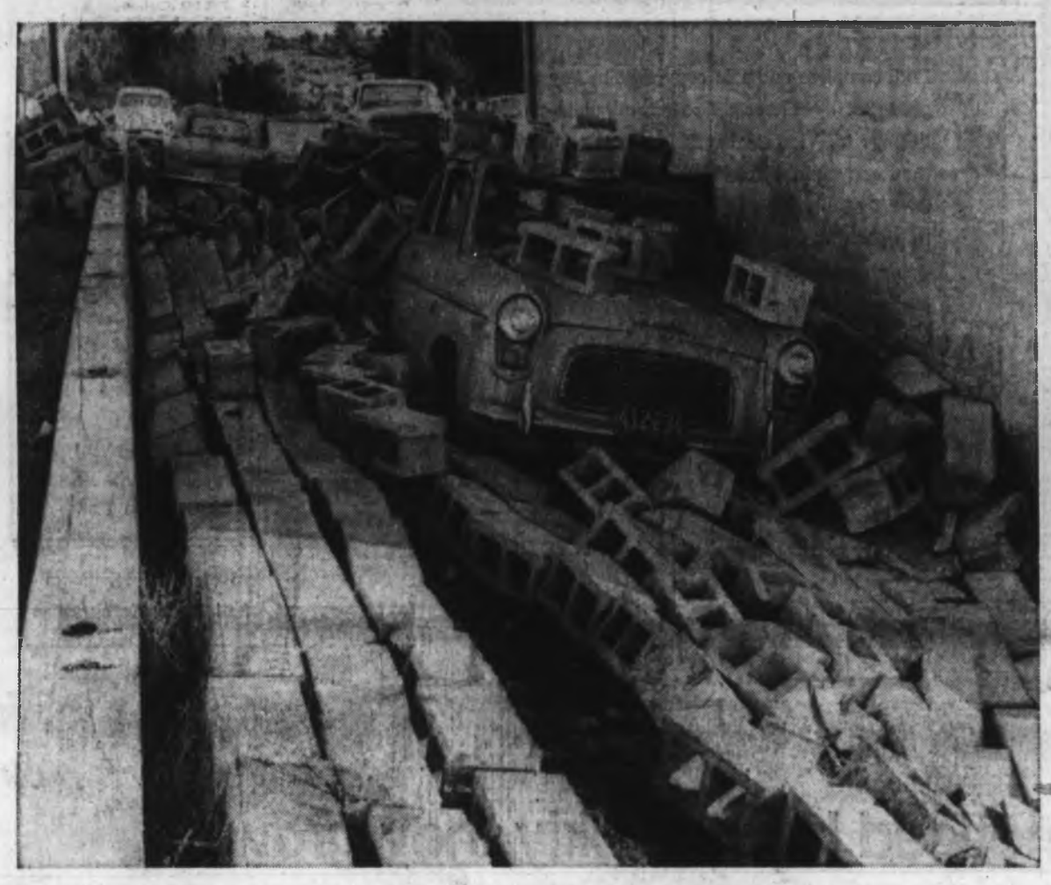

It was necessary to establish equality of status between English- and French-speaking communities and to build a strong and viable sovereign state with an ever-increasing standard of living.

The powers of the federal government must remain strong enough to eliminate the regional disparities in Canada, he said. This might mean some "special arrangement," with Quebec.

PEARSON PRAISED

Creditiste Leader Caouette, after congratulating the commissioners for the report, praised Pearson as the person chiefly responsible for national understanding of French-Canadian problems.

Caouette said Canada had never experienced this kind of understanding before, even under French-speaking prime ministers.

Big Storm Smash Hit On Island

Winds smashed roofs, knocked trees over roads, and sent concrete-block wall tumbling onto cars in Nanaimo as storm swept Vancouver Island Tuesday. (See story Page 11.) Chains were required on Malahat, as heavy snow slowed traffic. Police said snow was also heavy in Alberni-Tofino and Shawnigan Lake area. — (Agnes Flett)

Volcano Wrecks Bases

Antarctic Sea Boils

SANTIAGO (AP) — A volcano erupting unexpectedly from the depths of an ancient lake on the Antarctic island of Deception wrecked the scientific bases of three nations Tuesday and forced researchers to flee, Chilean officials reported.

Braving a rain of ashes and rocks, Chilean Navy helicopters took 30 Chilean and eight British researchers and military personnel to the Chilean ship Piloto Pardo waiting off shore.

Argentine navy helicopters took off 14 Argentine men and landed them on the Argentine ship Bahia Aguirre. The navy said the sea was boiling and the ship left the scene in a hail of rocks hurled from the volcano.

No volcanic eruption had been reported in more than 120 years on the island until geysers of boiling water from the lake began shooting up several days ago. The island is 600 miles south of the tip of South America.

Then the volcano erupted in full fury Monday, sending ash and rock into the air and sending lava down ravines from the lake. A dense cloud of smoke shrouded the island and ashes blanketed the white ice caps.

BASES WRECKED

The interior ministry said the British, Chilean and Argentine bases, hewn from the bitterly cold wastes, were wrecked by the volcano's force. The bases are used for weather and oceanographic research.

A Chilean Navy spokesman said helicopters had to be used to bring off the Chileans and Britons because rough waters and the eruption of ashes and stones made it impossible to use boats.

"We shan't be returning to the island until we know it is completely safe," said a British spokesman.

"If we were to land the men again after a few months and there was another eruption, we couldn't get them off. The Antarctic winter would have settled in and the area would be completely inaccessible."

Someone Knew, Cared —Now Someone Lives

The "500" Fund

It is not overly dramatic to state that for the hard-pressed, the receipt of a 500 Fund cheque has sometimes meant withdrawal from the brink of suicide.

To a person temporarily deranged by worry, a cheque means somebody knows and cares. A few dollars provides the spur to go on.

Last Christmas was just such a one for 31-year-old Joan and her young son.

Widowed two years earlier, she had come to Victoria to take a course that would enable her to be self-supporting.

For 18 months she had struggled to study, inadequately clothed, poorly fed, and usually downright hungry.

The boy, looked after during the day by another welfare recipient, was old enough to tell her what he wanted for Christmas.

TRUSTING REPLY

She tried to explain that she could not get him the modest treat, but was met with the trusting reply: "If you can't get it, Santa Claus will, and he'll give us a tree that lights, and lots of things to eat."

Heartbroken by his simple trust, she was ready to commit suicide rather than go on any longer when a cheque for $30 arrived from the Colonist 500 Fund, and changed her life.

This year things have changed. She successfully completed her course and now has an adequate income.

This year she is giving to the fund instead of receiving, thought her donation will still

Immolation Beside UN

NEW YORK (UPI) — A young man climbed over a fence into the United Nations grounds Tuesday night and set fire to himself, apparently with gasoline. He was rushed to hospital in critical condition.

France Stops Carmichael

PARIS (CP) — French police detained Stokeley Carmichael at Orly Airport Tuesday night, preventing the American Black Power advocate from speaking at a rally called to denounce the war in Vietnam, official sources said.

The sources reported Carmichael would be put aboard a plane today for any destination of his choice. He had arrived from Stockholm, Sweden, via Copenhagen, Denmark. He was expected to return to the United States today.

Storm Slashes Island

Blow Ye Winds!

Snow swept the Malahat Tuesday night, many Island roads were impassable, hydro and telephone crews worked double-time to keep utilities running.

At Tofino, power was out for 14 hours, as west winds of 70 miles an hour lashed the west coast. The power was returned Tuesday night.

In Nanaimo, high winds knocked down trees, scattered branches, and stripped the roof-coating from the home of Lloyd Bertram, 199 Garner Crescent, allowing the home to be soaked.

On the Malahat late Tuesday, police were demanding cars have chains or snow tires.

Tofino schools were closed because of heating problems. Cowichan Valley loggers were unable to work because of heavy snow.

Trees Hit Homes

Hydro and telephone crews worked long hours Tuesday restoring electricity and telephone service in Duncan and most surrounding districts, following Tuesday morning's storm.

Reported to be one of the worst storms in the area for many years, winds were estimated up to 60 miles an hour.

The storm seemed to reach its peak around 5 a.m. when the power was disconnected in many areas including Duncan, Chemainus, Lake Cowichan, Cobble Hill, Mill Bay and Shawnigan Lake.

According to police, hardest hit areas were Old Koksilah Road, Cowichan Bay cutoff, Miller Road, Fairbridge and Lake Cowichan Road to Mesachie Lake.

As the winds increased, power and telephone lines were brought down by falling trees and limbs.

● Tuesday night in Parksville five hydro crews were just beginning to finish the repairs that kept them going through the day.

Seacrest and Wall Beach were last major areas to get power back.

● In Nanaimo windows were blown in, and a tree crashed over the homes of L. B. Thomas, 2067 Forest Drive, and Larry Giovando, 711 Northumberland.

● In Duncan, the power was off for over four hours in some areas, and at some localities including Gibbins Road, hydro crews were still working in the late afternoon.

Several residents reported windows were sucked out of their frames as the winds created a vacuum.

In many areas, including Fairbridge, farmers had difficulty milking their cows, Tuesday morning. The local radio station could not transmit for four hours.

● In Ladysmith damage was minor, but two boats were sunk, including a cabin cruiser. Police are still investigating the incidents.

● In Chemainus, power was off in different areas for one to four hours.

● In the Shawnigan Lake, Mill Bay and Cobble Hill areas, most power was restored by 10:00 a.m., but some telephones were still reported out in the afternoon.

● The Lake Cowichan area was without power for about 4½ hours, but no serious damage was reported.

Nanaimo Candidate:

Civic Infighting Must Be Stopped

NANAIMO — Open meetings, civic co-operation, and progress on amalgamation were pledged Tuesday in a vigorous speech by Ted Barsby, candidate for mayor.

Speaking at an all-candidate meeting Tuesday night, Ald. Barsby said "There should be more open meetings, and better liaison between civic bodies."

He claimed the Civic Properties Commission and Advisory Planning Commission get together with council "only to fight."

Ald. Barsby said "This must be changed."

● All three candidates for the top job were agreed amalgamation with outside areas must come — eventually.

Ald. Barsby said "We had better get together, because our destiny is shaped together."

● Ald. Jack Parker, who spent nine years on council before running for mayor, said amalgamation will eventually come "in its own time."

He said city boundaries should be moved out slowly.

● Businessman Frank Ney told the meeting there should be positive thinking on the traffic bottleneck at the George Pearson Bridge.

He said the problem will not be solved by "just widening the bridge." Mr. Ney said the city needs public restrooms.

● Ald. Barsby told the meeting civic bodies should be told exactly why they are not getting money they request.

He commented "They deserve a better explanation than they have been getting."

Bishop Disturbed

North End Hurt

PORT ALBERNI — One of the biggest tasks facing city council is the encouragement of growth over the whole of the new amalgamated city, deputy Mayor Fred Bishop said.

"This is especially true if economy and growth are to be uniform," the mayoralty candidate said.

He expressed concern over "several disturbing situations" that have developed recently.

"In the north end of our city (the former Alberni area) the city hall is closed, and the Liquor Control Board closed its store with only five hours notice to the public and no notice whatsoever to the city, despite our numerous inquiries regarding their future plans.

Bishop

Positive Work

"In addition, a business establishment has moved its location to a new shopping centre," he said.

"The city hall closing was caused by amalgamation, but the others were not. Regardless of the cause, council must take corrective action to remedy these problems."

Mr. Bishop said there are a number of positive things under way which will assist.

The former city hall will be used again as soon as the regional district requires one or more full-time employees.

Cherry Creek

"When this happens, I shall press for convenient arrangements for northend residents to pay tax, water and sewer bills at this office, and continue to make every effort to rectify the liquor situation," Mr. Bishop said.

"For several months prior to amalgamation, the Alberni council was preparing plans for a new subdivision in the northeast corner adjacent to Cherry Creek Road," he added.

Plans for these lots have been completed and estimates prepared for installation of roads, sewers, and water services.

"These would be low priced to fit the budget of the average wage earner. We have recommended to the interim council that this subdivision be developed as soon as possible.

"These reasonably-priced lots must be made available in addition to the Redford Park lots," he said.

"The major reconstruction and beautification of Upper Johnston Road will also assist this area." The former mayor of Alberni added that tenders for the work by the department of highways will be called Dec. 15.

Flood control work on River Road and Kitsuksis Creek will be of benefit to the area and encourage greater development, and will proceed as soon as negotiations for the final strips of land needed have been completed with all property owners, Mr. Bishop said.

Cowichan Regional District

Clerk Solves Voter Confusion

By JEAN MacGREGOR

MILL BAY — Who can vote for the candidate of his choice in Saturday's election to the new regional district board?

That question has stumped both voters and candidates, but now Duncan city clerk Gordon Berry says he has the answer.

He said residents will be able to vote for directors in their specific areas, and the Cowichan school district list will be used to set boundaries.

Eight Came

At an all-candidates meeting, the question of who could vote for which candidate puzzled everyone.

The meeting, sponsored by the South Cowichan Taxpayers' Association, was attended by eight out of the 13 candidates seeking election.

Hedley Warner of Mill Bay, and David Laverock of Shawnigan Lake, both declined to attend.

Cobble Hill

Bruce Devitt, a school trustee for the Cowichan district, was attending a school board meeting; James Brown was instructing a night school class, and John Bailey had stated previously he would try to attend, but was not at the meeting.

Farm operator George Braithwaite, who is seeking election in the Cobble Hill area, said he has been active in public affairs since coming to the Cobble Hill district in 1952, including serving as a director of several organizations.

His opponent in the Cobble Hill area, John Balme, also owner of a large farm, said he was opposed to the formation of regional district at first.

"I thought it would raise taxes and bring interference from the government," Mr. Balme said. "Now I feel the regional district can do a good job."

Save Money

School teacher and librarian Frank Martin, of Shawnigan Lake, stated his motto was "make the regional district work for us."

Building supply firm manager Angus McKinnon of the Cowichan Bay area, stated "First let me say that I believe in the concept of regional districts.

"I think it is important that those running for office on the regional council should believe in the idea."

Glen Spinks of Cowichan Bay, who has been serving on the district's interim board, said "There is a lot to be done in the area, and one way to save money is by not throwing away the experience I have had on the board for the past four months."

He said he has been responsible for the development of a subdivision in Cowichan Bay, which helped to open up the area.

Development

The third candidate for the Cowichan Bay area, Jeff Tothill, a high school teacher, states "I feel we can save a lot of money by being prepared to spend money right from the start.

"We must not pennypinch now, or in 10 years we will be asking ourselves why we did not develop certain aspects before."

Poultry farmer, C. B. Meredith of Mill Bay has served on the Koksilah Hospital Improvement district board since its formation eight years ago.

He said, "I have learned a great deal from serving on the hospital district board, and I have found that a body of ordinary people can save the taxpayers money.

"I will not be pushed into any expenditure of public money that is not feasible or economical."

The last speaker was insurance claims manager John Bateson, who has served as a chairman of the Interim Cowichan Valley Regional District Board for the past four months.

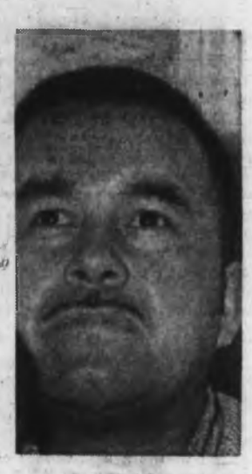

Fast Progress

He said "I have studied the regional district concept for the past two years. I feel the district is going to progress even faster in the future than it is now, and anything which assists this progress should be promoted.

"I do not think the government should manage everything in every district."

Unknown Folk Fight For Cultural Hall

DUNCAN — Hopes are high among Cowichan Indians that next year they will be able to build their $100,000 cultural and recreational centre at Somenos.

As Abel Joe put it in his brief to the centennial cultural fund advisory committee at Victoria, "Our project is to build a bridge between our two cultures.

"When the members of the Cowichan band were asked to plan a project to mark the 100th year of nationhood of this country, we were brought face to face with the bitter fact of our special exclusiveness."

Mr. Joe said "We have a great deal of feeling of community and we want with all our hearts to be part of our country.

"We have been trying for 100 years to learn the white man's culture.

"We have mastered his language, we wear his clothes, we copy his houses.

"But we have not learned enough to be included in Canada.

"The white man calls us lazy and dirty, our children drop out of school and nobody understands what happened to them.

★ ★ ★

"The people of Duncan don't know us.

"They see all our mistakes and know nothing of what makes our lives rich and rewarding.

"The real value of our building project is more precious and perhaps unattainable.

"But it is the only way we can think of to share our community with our neighbors who are so very far ahead of us in being Canadian."

★ ★ ★

Mr. Joe's helper on the fund raising committee, band manager Ross Modeste, said "I suppose you can call it very discouraging that the assistance we hoped to get did not materialize.

"We will go ahead with our plans, and if we put the foundation for the cultural hall up this spring, then there will be evidence of our determination."

Signs Have Four Years of Life

COURTENAY — All signs erected in the city of Courtenay will have to conform to new rules and regulations adopted by council.

In addition, many existing signs will only have a future life span of four years, after which they too will be required to conform.

The four-year term was given so that merchants on a lease or rent plan would have time to decide what future action would be taken.

A sign bylaw, which has been more than a year in the planning stage, was given three readings by Courtenay council.

★ ★ ★

The bylaw, 11 pages in length, was submitted by Ald. A. H. Strachan, who said help had been received from the chamber of commerce in planning the content of the bylaw.

Four principles were outlined as guides for the material contained in the bylaw.

● The first was listed as community benefit, and was cited as being anything which will make the commercial streets appear uncluttered, orderly and efficient.

Safety in construction was noted and also maintenance of signs in top condition at all times.

● The second principle used as a guide was named as sign users' protection.

It was pointed out that signs are a valuable advertising medium and the merchants' right to the best possible use of that medium for the promotion of their business must be protected.

The guide took note of the fact that it was essential that no discrimination be imposed by law or regulation.

● Under the heading of shoppers' convenience, it was noted that identification of business places should be facilitated for the benefit of citizens who have occasion to visit them.

● Traffic safety was listed as the final guide. The bylaw was designed to prevent any adjacent sign from distracting attention from a traffic signal.

The guide adds "with the increasing number of traffic accidents, anything that will add to traffic safety or eliminate hazards on the streets is of paramount importance."

Ald. Ken Willis questioned Section 12(B) which states projecting signs shall be erected so that the lowest part is at least 16 feet above the level of the sidewalk.

Ald. Harry Harris also remarked on several points including one on Section 10(C) which deals with animated signs. It states that no animated display or sign with a flashing element viable from any residence in a residential area, shall be located closer than 75 feet to such dwelling. Mr. Harris said the distance was not sufficient.

The suggestions made at the meeting will be studied by the committee which worked on the sign bylaw.

In the report of Clerk-Administrator Bill Moore, it was noted police court fines remain about the same level with $1,530 coming to the city last month.

The traffic supervisor issued 99 tickets and is currently checking on those who overpark in city parking lots.

The administrator said "The boom is being lowered on such people."

The 10-minute parking signs in the post office area will go into effect soon and signs will be erected in that area.

★ ★ ★

Council learned the new snow plow has arrived, a parking meter was stolen over the weekend, the city Christmas tree will go up this week, and the river reached serious proportions three times over the weekend.

Notice of motion was also given to amend the fireworks bylaw, although no indication was given as to what the amendment might be.

Show Cash

Turkeys, Candy, Oranges And Lots of Friendship

PORT ALBERNI — Turkeys, Christmas stockings, oranges, pies, cutlery for 500 people . . . the list of items needed for the annual Christmas dinner at Port Alberni Friendship Centre seemed almost endless.

But at the end of a couple of hours, the Christmas party committee of the centre had a plan of action and healthy list of donations from members to start off their major project of the year.

★ ★ ★

This year's Christmas party committee is made up of Chairman Edgar Charlie, Secretary Margaret Johnson and Treasurer Francis Amos, the newly appointed manager of the centre.

Roy Sutherland and Simon Lucas head the program committee, charged with providing entertainment for the big party scheduled for Dec. 22.

★ ★ ★

More than 60 members, representing the various young peoples and adult groups that use the Friendship Centre, were on hand to offer their services.

Everything from potato peeling to dishwashing, turkey-cooking to table decorating, is undertaken by various groups within the centre.

★ ★ ★

For one desperate minute, it looked as though the valley braves might have to turn their hands to potato peeling for 500 people, but promise of the use of the automatic potato peeler at the residential school brought a round of applause and sighs of relief.

Pledges from the audience brought offers of four turkeys, some home-made pies, a box of apples, a sack of potatoes, and cash to provide for unexpected emergencies.

Last year, the centre planned for 300 at the party.

More than 600 people, about two thirds of them children, turned out for the gala event. Now they know what to expect, the Christmas party committee is planning accordingly.

The women's group at the centre is providing candy for the 350 to 400 bags that will be needed, but members would appreciate help with providing the apples or oranges, and nuts that make a real Christmas treat for the youngsters.

★ ★ ★

One of the biggest problems faced by the committee is the lack of cutlery for such a large crowd. Ever with two, and possibly three sittings, cutlery for 200 people is required.

Hammer Honored By Navy League

PORT ALBERNI — Mayor Les Hammer was honored when he was presented with a life membership scroll by Denis W. Brown, national vice-president of the Navy League of Canada.

An honor guard, band and marching division of the Sea Cadets and members of the E. L. Hammer Wrenette Corps assembled outside Port Alberni city hall for the event.

Mr. Brown inspected the honor guard. The parade was inspected by Mr. Brown, Mayor Hammer and Leonard Rowlands, local president of the Navy League of Canada.

● During the march past, Mr. Brown took the salute in front of city hall, and at Mayor Hammer's invitation the assembled company of Cadets, Wrenettes, spectators and guests went into city hall for the actual presentation.

The national vice-president, in making the presentation, said life memberships in the Navy League are not lightly bestowed, and touched on Mr. Hammer's long record of interest and activity in the league.

● Active in work with the Cadets since the end of the war, Mr. Hammer was 12 years officer commanding RCSOC Alberni, the local cadet group which was not named for the city, but for HMCS Alberni, a corvette which was sunk off Normandy.

In thanking Mr. Brown for the award, Mr. Hammer noted that the beautifully-framed scroll will be a companion piece to two others also given by the Navy League, one for service and the other a copy of the charter setting out the local Wrenette corps in his name.

● Mayor Hammer also mentioned his pleasure 'that several of the men now commanding the local Sea Cadets corps started as youngsters under his command.

"It shows the value of the training. Those who had to learn to take orders are now able to give orders, and have found a proven place both in their employment and in the life of the community," Mr. Hammer said in discussing the work of the Navy League after the ceremony.

Bread Price Boost 'Quite Possible'

Price of bread is expected to increase in Victoria following the announcement in Vancouver Monday that a major bakery is making the move.

McGavin Toastmaster Ltd. will increase the price of its bread by two cents for a one-pound loaf and three cents for a 24-ounce loaf, said president Allan McGavin.

The increase will be effective next Monday, he said.

New prices will be 26 cents for a one-pound loaf and 37 cents for the large loaf, he said.

Increased labor costs and ingredient prices were blamed.

In Victoria, John L. McDonald, manager of McDonald's Bakery Ltd., largest local producer, said an increase was "quite possible."

Education Winning Toy Battle

By NANCY BROWN

War is out. Education is in.

At least that's the way it looks on Victoria's toy counters this Christmas.

Games of destruction are to be found, but they have dropped out of favor compared to biology, zoology and rock kits.

Jackson Briggs, a department store merchandising manager, confirmed Monday that the trend was away from destruction.

"This is a trend we're glad to see and encourage," he said. "It fits in with our philosophy."

"The Voice of Women and other groups have done a good job in bringing to the public's attention the poor influence of some toys."

COMPETITIVE

Although the store is actively encouraging the trend and accentuating a variety of educational, constructive and pure fun toys, he said that in the past it had been necessary to stock war toys in greater numbers than the store liked.

"We're in a competitive business, and we must stock what is asked for, or people will go elsewhere," he said.

"Mothers today want the best for their kids," he said.

CHANCE TO DO

"They don't want their children to go to war and be killed or to kill. They want them to be the best educated.

"Such things as chemistry sets are coming right back into favor," said Mr. Briggs.

"Nearly all the toys on the market this year give the children a chance to do things, rather than sit back and watch."

Mrs. Valerie MacDermot of the Voice of Women said the group was sending letters of appreciation to merchants this year because of the decrease in war toys.

"We must never teach our children to be destructive, and Christmas time is a time for love and joy, not to teach killing.

"I think people are realizing this, and are getting self-conscious about asking for destructive toys now."

HARD TO CHOOSE

Mrs. W. E. Rolls of the Victoria branch of the Consumers Association said the bewildering array of toys before the public made it difficult to make a choice.

"It's not always necessary to pay a lot to give a child a lot of enjoyment," she said.

"Everyday items that aren't strictly toys give a lot of pleasure.

MAGNET

"Quite young children get a kick out of a reading glass, or a horseshoe magnet," explained Mrs. Rolls.

She also recommended small size pots, pans and cookie cutters, or a tack hammer, nails and soft wood scraps.

"Every year," said Mrs. Rolls, "the Consumers Association tests and evaluates toys, and makes recommendations.

"These recommendations are now available."

Sand Filter Ban Not Universal

Saanich council was told Monday night that subdivisions which have received approval to any degree are probably excluded from new regulations banning sand filters on septic tanks.

"This is good news," said Reeve Hugh Curtis, after hearing a report from Dr. J. L. M. Whitbread, Greater Victoria's senior medical health officer. "I think we can all breathe a little easier."

Dr. Whitbread told Saanich council he would have all the new septic tank regulations clarified with provincial authorities within two weeks.

SAND FILTERS

Last week, he told the municipality's lands and planning committee that sand filters were forbidden. On Monday night, he explained that this ruling had been in effect in municipalities outside of Saanich for two years.

Dr. Whitbread explained that, as he understood the new regulations, they would not apply to subdivision plans which had been approved by municipal authorities in any way.

"Anything which has been set in motion and has received a nod . . . well, the new regulations would not apply," added L. E. Benham, senior environmental health inspector with the metropolitan health board.

INDUSTRIAL WASTE

Dr. Whitbread explained that problems of waste from industry had been placed under the jurisdiction of the Pollution Control Board, but waste disposal from homes and schools remained within his board's jurisdiction.

Council was also told that chemicals should not be used to kill weeds in Elk and Beaver Lakes.

The suggestion came from a committee studying restoration of Colquitz Creek and the Gorge. Most of the University of Victoria's biology professors are members.

The committee suggested that instead of using herbicides to kill the weeds — Saanich last summer used 2,4-D — the growth that is a hazard to swimmers and boats should be cut.

The experts also felt a comprehensive plan should be prepared for Elk-Beaver Lake Park, along with a study of future land uses along the watershed.

BI & BI REPORT SUPPORTS MINORITIES

—CP

Co-Chairmen Laurendeau, Dunton

'Living in French must be made possible in every part of Canada where there are enough French-speaking people'

Bilingual Areas 'Cornerstone'

OTTAWA (CP)—The royal commission on bilingualism and biculturalism recommends what it calls a new charter, including constitutional changes, to guarantee minority language and education rights to both French and English-speaking Canadians throughout the country.

In tabling the report Tuesday in the Commons, Prime Minister Pearson repeated that "the government fully endorses the principle of linguistic and cultural equality that forms the core of this report."

Pearson said the cabinet has already considered the report and that he is suggesting that it be added to the agenda for the federal-provincial constitutional conference here early next year. (See also Page 14).

Davidson Dunton, co-chairman of the commission, told a press conference the commission has no firm reason to believe that any province outside Quebec will adopt any of its recommendations.

Andre Laurendeau, the commission's other co-chairman, said he has serious doubts that the report will convert Quebec separatists into federalists.

Dunton emphasized that the aim of the report is not to make all Canadians bilingual—or even any more than now are bilingual.

The aim was to make language and education opportunities available to French or English minorities.

Six of the commission's recommendations deal primarily with matters under provincial jurisdiction. Five involve both the federal and provincial administrations and three lie within Ottawa's jurisdiction.

Both Dunton and Laurendeau said the national crisis they referred to in their 1965 preliminary report still exists.

"It is very much still here—the same one," Dunton added.

The commission report says:

"The impossibility of living a full life in French outside Quebec and even in certain parts of Quebec is certainly one cause of the present crisis in Canada.

"Living in French must be made possible in every part of Canada where there are enough French-speaking people."

To achieve this end, the commission recommends:

● New Brunswick and Ontario recognize English and French as official languages as soon as possible.

● Any other province recognize English and French as official languages whenever its official-language minority reaches or exceeds 10 per cent of the population.

● Provinces other than Quebec, New Brunswick and Ontario accept use of both languages in legislature debates and provide appropriate services in French for French-speaking minorities.

● Establishment of bilingual district anywhere in Canada that the official-language minority is 10 per cent or more of the population.

● Recognition of the rights of Canadian parents to have their children educated in French or English, implementation depending on the concentration of the minority population.

● Declaration that English and French are the official languages of the Parliament of Canada and federal courts, government and administration.

● Provincial governments amend their municipal legislation to remove all obstacles to the use of both French and English in local government.

● Enactment of a federal official language act and appointment of a commissioner of official languages—a "linguistic ombudsman"—to ensure respect for the status of both languages.

● Enactment of a similar act by the legislatures of officially bilingual provinces and appointment of provincial commissioners.

● A completely bilingual federal capital area at Ottawa—bilingual in public service and administration, courts, local government and education.

The commission also recommends a new section in the British North America Act to guarantee minority education rights and a rewritten section 133 to guarantee minority language rights outside Quebec.

B.C. GROUP SEEKING GRADE 1 IN FRENCH

COQUITLAM (CP) — The French-Canadian Federation of British Columbia has announced it will ask for French to be used as a language of instruction in public school primary grades in this Vancouver suburb.

Federation secretary-general Romeo Paquette said the proposal would be made at a Dec. 12 meeting between the federation and school trustees of district 43.

★ ★ ★

The federation is taking the initiative because of a recent comment by Premier Bennett, said Mr. Paquette.

"Mr. Bennett said French language instruction in the public school system could be considered where there was a concentration of French-speaking people in the community and if the district school board made such a request," he said.

★ ★ ★

"We hope we can convince District 43 school board to make such a request."

Mr. Paquette estimated that there were 3,000 French-speaking people within the school district, most living in the suburb of Maillardville.

★ ★ ★

He said the federation would like to see French language classes begin at Grade 1 and gradually work up through the higher grades of Coquitlam's school system. They should, he said, be optional.

"This would mean that by the time a student graduates from Grade 12, he could become fluent in both French and English."

★ ★ ★

Bonner Studies First

British Columbia government circles made no immediate comment Tuesday on the contents of the Bi and Bi report.

Premier Bennett was not available, and Attorney-General Robert Bonner said the report was a long time in the making and declined to give "an off the cuff summary of its contents." He said he would study it carefully.

Liquor Prices Up Today

The B.C. Liquor Control Board Tuesday night announced a price increase for spirits, beer and wine effective today.

The board said beer prices increase by five cents a dozen, ale by 10 cents, spirits go up by 35 cents for a 26-ounce bottle and 20 cents for the 13-ounce bottle. Wine prices increased by 10 cents aquart and 20 cents for a half-gallon.

★ ★ ★

Unity Holds Key

OTTAWA (CP)—Prime Minister Pearson told the Commons Tuesday solutions to the giant problems underscored by the royal commission on bilingualism and biculturalism must be based on unity and partnership.

"They must, they will, be found so Canada can live and grow to provide a good life for all its people."

Opposition Leader Robert Stanfield said the health and future of Confederation is involved in the issue and Parliament, the government and all political parties must be prepared to provide leadership.

The Progressive Conservative party had no desire to derive any partisan advantage from any matters dealt with in the report

FULLY AWARE

"Our party will study this with full awareness of the gravity of the matters being discussed."

Stanfield said he hoped the full report of the commission would be made available as soon as possible. Some of the recommendations came under jurisdiction of the provinces, but "the whole area of federal-provincial relations relates to problems of concern to the country as a whole."

He recommended the first step would be for the prime minister to consult with the working committee of premiers.

PROBLEM ESCALATES

Stanfield said the problems had "been escalated" in recent months.

He questioned to what degree the Estates General of French-Canada represented the people and said it was fortunate the Confederation of Tomorrow conference took place in Toronto at the same time as the Estates General met in Montreal.

"It would be depressing for Canadians to have only the picture created by the Estates General."

Stanfield said he was not inclined to melodrama or to oversimplification, but "the future of the country is in our hands."

"We will be put to the test. I hope we will not be found wanting."

SOLUTIONS NEEDED

NDP Leader Tommy Douglas said those who find the recommendations of the report radical should realize that radical solutions are needed for the country's problems.

It was necessary to establish equality of status between English- and French-speaking communities and to build a strong and viable sovereign state with an ever-increasing standard of living.

The powers of the federal government must remain strong enough to eliminate the regional disparities in Canada, he said. This might mean some "special arrangement," with Quebec.

PEARSON PRAISED

Creditiste Leader Real Caouette, after congratulating the commissioners for the report, praised Pearson as the person chiefly responsible for national understanding of French-Canadian problems.

Caouette said Canada had never experienced this kind of understanding before, even under French-speaking prime ministers.

Big Storm Smash Hit On Island

Winds smashed roofs, knocked trees over roads, and sent concrete-block wall tumbling onto cars in Nanaimo as storm swept Vancouver Island Tuesday. (See stories Pages 11, 39) Chains were required on Malahat, as heavy snow slowed traffic. Police said snow was also heavy in Alberni-Tofino and Shawnigan Lake area. — (Agnes Flett)

Volcano Wrecks Bases

Antarctic Sea Boils

SANTIAGO (AP) — A volcano erupting unexpectedly from the depths of an ancient lake on the Antarctic island of Deception wrecked the scientific bases of three nations Tuesday and forced researchers to flee, Chilean officials reported.

Braving a rain of ashes and rocks, Chilean Navy helicopters took 30 Chilean and eight British researchers and military personnel to the Chilean ship Piloto Pardo waiting off shore.

Argentine navy helicopters took off 14 Argentine men and landed them on the Argentine ship Bahia Aguirre. The navy said the sea was boiling and the ship left the scene in a hail of rocks hurled from the volcano.

No volcanic eruption had been reported in more than 120 years on the island until geysers of boiling water from the lake began shooting up several days ago. The island is 600 miles south of the tip of South America.

Then the volcano erupted in full fury Monday, sending ash and rock into the air and sending lava down ravines from the lake. A dense cloud of smoke shrouded the island and ashes blanketed the white ice caps.

BASES WRECKED

The interior ministry said the British, Chilean and Argentine bases, hewn from the bitterly cold wastes, were wrecked by the volcano's force. The bases are used for weather and oceanographic research.

"We shan't be returning to the island until we know it is completely safe," said a British spokesman.

"If we were to land the men again after a few months and there was another eruption, we couldn't get them off. The Antarctic winter would have settled in and the area would be completely inaccessible."

Someone Knew, Cared —Now Someone Lives

The "500" Fund

It is not overly dramatic to state that for the hard-pressed, the receipt of a 500 Fund cheque has sometimes meant withdrawal from the brink of suicide.

To a person temporarily deranged by worry, a cheque means somebody knows and cares. A few dollars provides the spur to go on.

Last Christmas was just such a one for 31-year-old Joan and her young son.

Widowed two years earlier, she had come to Victoria to take a course that would enable her to be self-supporting.

For 18 months she had struggled to study, inadequately clothed, poorly fed, and usually downright hungry.

TRUSTING REPLY

She tried to explain that she could not get him the modest treat, but was met with the trusting reply: "If you can't get it, Santa Claus will, and he'll give us a tree that lights, and lots of things to eat."

Heartbroken by his simple trust, she was ready to commit suicide rather than go on any longer when a cheque for $30 arrived from the Colonist 500 Fund, and changed her life.

This year things have changed. She successfully completed her course and now has an adequate income.

This year she is giving to the fund instead of receiving, thought her donation will still

Sitter Leads Way for Trio

Seventeen-year-old babysitter Pat Dawes roused her three charges, Chris, 8, Michael, 10 and Janet 4, dressed them and led them to safety when she smelled smoke at 1617 Pembroke at 12:15 a.m. today.

Then she returned with firemen and led the family dog, Sweetie to safety from the basement.

Firemen said the blaze heavily damaged the porch.
